The Carmel Pine Cone

AFTER EIGHT MONTHS of waiting, Shirley Mitchell of Carmel finally got her wish. Movers pulled the board-and-batten house she bought in Carmel last August to the lot she owns in Carmel Valley. After a few hair-raising turns, like this one across Highway 1 to Carmel Valley Road, the 12-mile drive into the Valley went smoothly.

Council asked to impose moratorium

Revamp of building codes passed by planners

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

THE CARMEL CITY Council again will be asked to impose a moratorium on the construction of so-called "large houses."

This one, however, is a "limited" moratorium.

That means the building ban only will affect proposed projects that fail to meet a set of new restrictions outlined in a resolution passed April 26 by the Carmel Planning Commission. Residential construction projects within the guidelines would be permitted.

The recommendation is for the "limited" moratorium because the commission needs more time to study other residential building ordinance changes, according to Planning Commissioner Dr. Donald Davidson.

"A limited moratorium will allow us more time for study, without completely tying down construction in the residential district," Davidson said.

He said the moratorium would defer construction of houses that "are or could be looked at as large."

FOR LACK of a needed fourth affirmative vote, the City Council could not enact a similar moratorium in March. It would have halted construction of all two-story homes. Councilman Bernard Anderson, who opposed the moratorium, has since retired and his successor, Howard Brunn, has said he would favor it.

The resolution is scheduled to be introduced to the City Council when it meets Monday at 8 p.m. at City Hall.

After nearly two months of debate, the Carmel Planning Commission voted unanimously on Wednesday of last week to ask the City Council for a four-month moratorium. Chairman Dorothea Roberts was absent.

The "limited" moratorium would not affect most Carmel homes. It primarily applies to houses on lots larger than 4,000 square feet. The majority of Carmel lots are smaller.

But the key restriction that would apply to all new houses and homes where remodeling is planned is a revised method for measuring building height. The height restriction would particularly affect houses built on slopes.

Although the citywide height limit would remain at 24 feet, building inspectors would enforce it differently. Rooflines would have to follow the contour of a lot's grade. Presently, a house on a grade could have a wall longer than 24 feet if it was situated on the low end of the lot.

Downhill walls are the crux of the "large house" problem. The walls look inordinately large to neighbors located on the downhill side of them. The planners' resolution is designed to limit the visual impact.

The resolution also would eliminate use permits. Builders of homes that exceeded 24 feet but were lower than 30 feet previously obtained use permits from the building department. Variances have been required for houses up to 33 feet in height if they faced certain construction hardships because of unusual land slope. Variances, unlike use permits, must be approved by the planning commission.

With residential use permits abolished, anyone who proposed a project over 24 feet high would have to apply for a variance.

DURING THE moratorium, the commission and the council would attempt to adopt permanent ordinances to keep new and remodeled homes smaller and more in keeping with earlier Carmel architecture.

Since March, the commission has been under a council order to study the "large house" issue. The resolution recommending a limited moratorium is the eulmination of its work.

The commission has met in six special sessions and four regular sessions while studying "large houses." The two most recent sessions lasted for more than five hours.

Commissioner Dr. Manfred Prescott, who missed two of the special study sessions, was baffled by the call for a moratorium.

"Why is the word 'moratorium' being used?" he asked. State law requires that term, City Planning Director Bob Griggs told him.

"But are these standards any different from our present code?" he then asked the commission as a whole.

Chins dropped and a few commissioners groaned when they heard the inquiry. Two commissioners spoke at once trying to explain the changes.

THE CITY building department will face new hardships during the interim period, Chief Building Inspector Fred Cunningham stated. "We're going to take the brunt of this over the counter," he said.

It will take a while to explain the new guidelines to builders, he explained.

The new restrictions could result in the construction of more two-story homes, Cunningham said Thursday.

"Facing new size restrictions, builders will seek the greatest possible living space," he said. Second stories would increase usable floor area, he explained.

The commission also has recommended graduated coverage restrictions on larger lots. It would apply only to homes on lots larger than 4,000 square feet.

As lots get larger, the percentage of land they could cover would decrease. The graduated scale was devised in February by Commissioner Robert Stephenson.

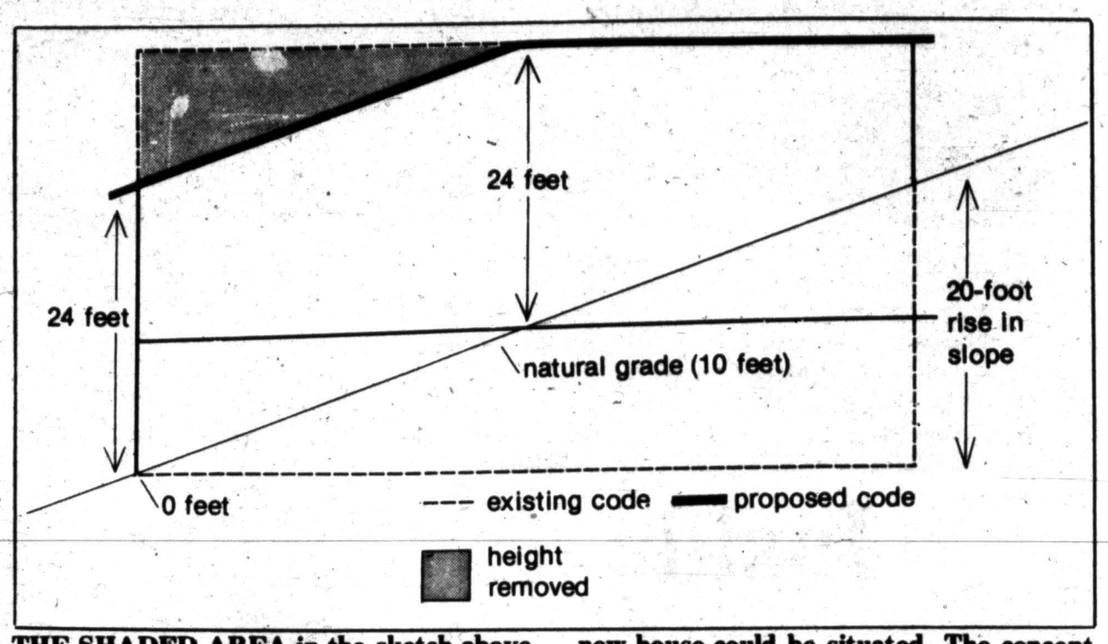

Under the proposal, allowed coverage on larger lots would gradually decrease about 2 per cent for each additional 1,000 square feet of lot space.

Two-story structures on lots exceeding 8,000 square feet would be limited to 30 per cent coverage. They may now cover 35 per cent of the lot.

"That will be a lot harder for the public to understand," remarked Commissioner Leslie Gross at the commission's final study session on April 21.

"Anybody who can figure out their income tax can figure out this system," said

The dotted line below the grade indicates where the bottom floor of a new house could be situated. The concept, as illustrated, would apply regardless of whether the front of the house was situated on the high or low part of the slope. (Roberta A. Little illustration)

Three major changes

Three major changes are contained in the recommendations from the planning commission. They are:

- Allowed structural coverage on lots larger than 4,000 square feet would be reduced. Presently, all single-story homes may cover 40 per cent of the lot; two-story homes, 35 per cent. In the case of a lot between 4,000 and 5,000 square feet, the allowed coverages would become 38 and 34 per cent, respectively.
- Those who remodel a home or want to build a new one would have to modify their roofline if they build to the existing 24-foot height maximum. Rooflines would have to follow the contour of the slope of the lot. The planning commission, for the first time, would have to approve all permit requests for buildings higher than 24 feet.
- House setbacks on lots larger than 4,000 square feet would increase in most cases. The setback distance would have to equal 10 per cent of the length of the front line on the property. Homes on smaller lots need only observe the existing three-foot minimum.

Peace gesture offered to cultural commission

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

THE CITY COUNCIL has decided it will try to close the growing rift between itself and the Carmel Cultural and Community Commission.

Voting unanimously on Monday, the council scheduled a meeting with the commission and a second meeting with the public, to assess Carmel's cultural future. At issue is the commission's future role and the proper uses of Sunset Center.

"I must be ill tonight because I'm agreeing with Mr. Brown," remarked Councilman David Hughes, who made the motion for the meetings. It passed 4-0. Brown was the first to propose the joint sessions. The pair usually oppose each other on major issues.

City Administrator Jack Collins will select the meeting dates by Friday. Councilman Helen Arnold did not attend the meeting. She was in Oregon.

"In my four years on the council, we have not had a meeting with the Cultural Commission. There is a real breakdown in communications between them and us," Brown said.

Hughes asked the commission chairman, Jean White, how the council could improve its relations with the commission.

"The communication is really bad. We always seem to be bombarded at the last minute. We didn't even know this item was on the agenda until we received a call from a newspaper reporter," she said. Mayor

Commissioner protests lack of communication

Gunnar Norberg had asked that the role of the commission become an item of debate at the meeting. There was widespread speculation that he wanted to abolish the commission but he said nothing about it Monday.

COLLINS SAID HE had told Mrs. White a month ago that the matter could come up "in the near future." But Mrs. White said she called three councilmen last week, who all expressed surprise that the item was on the agenda.

No action was taken Monday to fill the three commission seats that will be vacant in June. The terms of Dr. Lewis Heniford and James Gilman expire on June 27, the commission's annual meeting date, along with the interim appointment of Alison Schwyzer, named in July 1977 to fill a vacancy.

The appointments should be made 30 days before the annual meeting "where possible," according to the City Code. Technically, that would require the mayor to appoint the commissioners next Monday, the last scheduled council meeting being June 5.

The commission should be restricted to a purely advisory role and enlarged to bolster community representation, Collins recommended.

COMMISSIONERS disagreed amongst themselves about the role of the commission, however.

The commission always has regarded itself as an advisory body, said Commissioner Bernard Van Horne. But Mrs. White said she would not want to see the commission become "purely advisory" in its actions.

Has the commission exceeded its powers by issuing directions to Sunset Center Director Richard Tyler? asked Norberg. He then answered himself by saying Tyler should answer directly to the city administrator, not to the commission.

"Do you see yourself (cultural commission) as being the boss of the director?" Councilman Howard Brunn asked.

"No," Mrs. White replied.

Norberg said past minutes of commission meetings indicate the commission is directing Tyler.

Cole Weston, named Sunset Center's first director in 1967, told the City Council it was "overlooking" the point of view of the director. "You've hired a man, Richard Tyler. You might not always like what he does, but you have to back the man you've got," he said.

"I see no reason to make any changes in the cultural commission," said former Mayor Barney Laiolo. "I think it's moving along very well," he said.

Bay dumping must stop, Carmel told

Water board aides reiterate terms of pending ban on sewage disposal

By KEN PETERSON

THE CARMEL SANITARY District may be barred from dumping any treated wastewater into Carmel Bay if a recommendation from the staff of the State Water Resources Control Board is adopted by the board. Action by the board is scheduled for June 7.

The only alternative to permit continued release into the bay would be removal of the designation that Carmel Bay is an Area of Special Biological Significance (ASBS). The district is reluctant to go that route and the water board staff recommends against it.

With the concurrence of its technical advisory committee, the district board intends to pursue alternatives which involve reclamation of treated wastewater for reuse on the Monterey Peninsula.

And committee member Earl Moser suggested a new recycling method on Wednesday of last week which the district will study. It involves the creation of a wildlife refuge on the agricultural Odello West property and purchase of the Odello East land as part of a comprehensive water treatment program. The property is situated on the south bank of the Carmel River mouth, adjacent to the water treatment plant.

District engineer Kevin Walsh met with the state staff members last Friday in Sacramento to discuss their recommendations. Their original suggestion was that the sanitary district not be permitted to present any of its four proposals for reclaiming the effluent it dumps in the bay. Walsh indicated they softened the position somewhat during the talks.

As a result of that meeting, Walsh said he believes the district will at least be able to offer the alternatives to the state board in June. But the board could decide to ban any bay discharge, leaving the district to solve the costly question of what to do with more than two million gallons of treated wastewater per day.

ALTERNATIVES PROPOSED by the district include use of a portion of the water to irrigate golf courses in Pebble Beach and Carmel Valley, to irrigate riparian vegetation along the Carmel River or high-rate irrigation of a parcel in Potrero Canyon, south of Carmel Valley.

None of the alternatives has advanced beyond the planning stage and all would require approval first from health department authorities. They would not eliminate all of the discharge into Carmel Bay, the stance favored by the state water quality planning and research staff.

Walsh said the district could pump its raw sewage over the hill to Monterey for disposal in the bay there. Monterey Bay was not designated an ASBS.

If the state board is adamant about ending discharge into the bay, the district might find the pipeline to Monterey is the only option available, he said.

But a public workshop last fall left district officials with the impression that Carmel area residents believe "reclaimed water is a resource and should be used here, not pumped to Monterey."

"If we commit ourselves to an overall reclamation scheme, it may take a while but eventually we could get to 100 per cent (reclamation)," he told the advisory committee when it met last week.

THE COST OF BUILDING a pipeline to Monterey is more costly than most of the alternatives endorsed by the district. Costs for the recycling proposals run between $6.5 million and $27 million. Shipping the sewage to Monterey would cost an estimated $13 million.

The district had been operating on the assumption that a certain amount of bay discharge would be permitted. Its alternatives for disposal were based on that assumption and the district was hoping to have a final choice ready by the state's July 1 deadline.

But the staff report, drafted late in April, reiterates the theme from the resolution creating the ASBS in Carmel Bay three years ago: "a continuous source of discharge would have to be phased out."

Ken McGinnis of the sanitary district board of directors questioned what the state means by "continuous" and what the phrase "phased out" means.

In the present state staff recommendation, this would apparently eliminate any discharge, even an intermittent one such as when wet weather precludes golf course irrigation.

Walsh said the alternative for irrigating riparian vegetation could eliminate 100 per cent of the wastewater outfall, but the other recycling alternatives could only handle from 28 to 60 per cent of the wastewater. The rest of the time—when there is too much rain to permit golf course irrigation, for example—the water again would be disposed of in the bay.

According to the state staff interpretation, Walsh noted, "These can all go to 99.9 per cent. Unless they go to 100 per cent, they aren't acceptable to the staff of the State Water Resources Control Board."

If the sewage is simply pumped to Monterey, some wastewater might be recycled for use on farmland near Salinas. But this would not help maintain the water-bearing Carmel River aquifer.

"Cal-Am (Water Co.) will pump water from the aquifer for Pebble Beach (golf courses) if the district doesn't use reclaimed water," McGinnis pointed out.

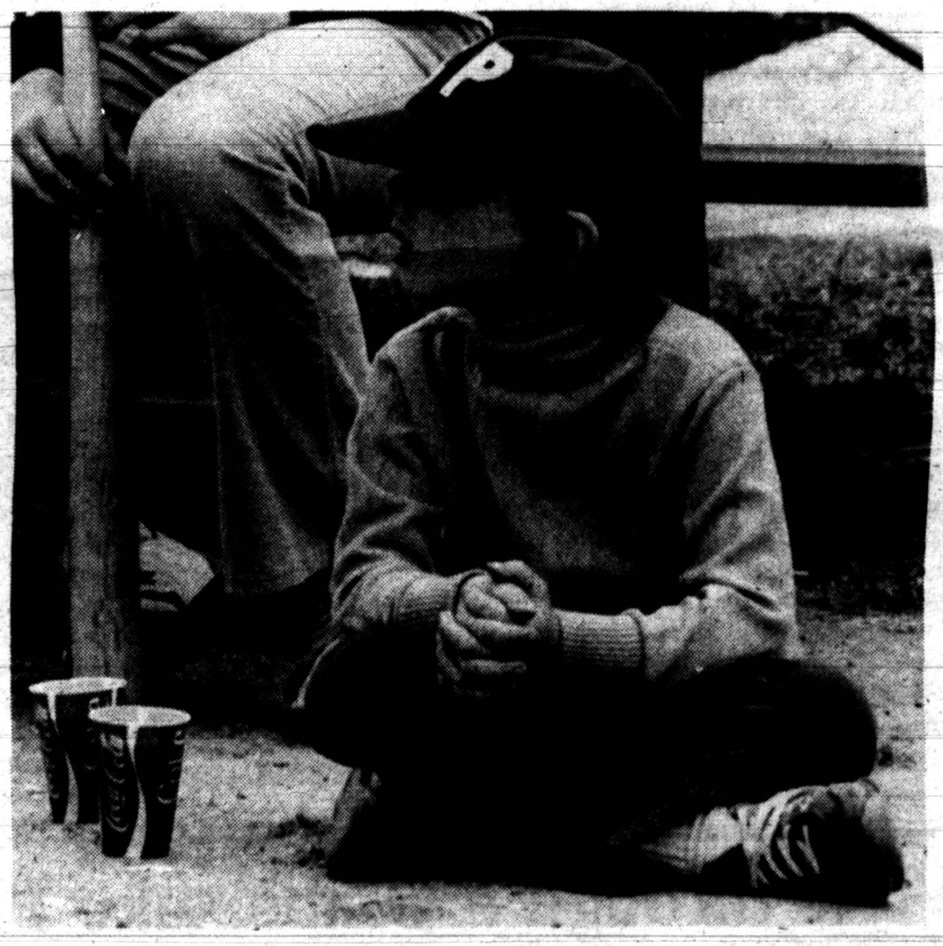

The only alternative open to the district would be a petition for elimination of the ASBS designation, according to the staff, if it wants to pursue its own alternatives.

Walsh said at the advisory committee meeting that the district also could seek a variance from the state to permit continued bay discharge. He noted, however, that only one

Superintendent predicts school closings by 1980

A PROJECTED drop of more than 10 per cent in elementary school enrollment may force the Carmel Unified School District to consider closing one or more elementary schools by 1980, District Superintendent Harris Taylor said last week.

Carmelo School in Carmel Valley and Woods School in Carmel would be the most likely candidates because of their present enrollments.

Taylor emphasized that there are no plans to close the schools now nor would the matter be considered until the board of trustees discusses its budget a year from now.

Trustees approved the first reading of a policy on closing of district schools at Taylor's suggestion when they met Tuesday, April 25.

The policy requires that the board appoint a Facilities Needs Advisory Committee "during any year when pupil enrollment in a small school can be absorbed in adjoining schools of the same level."

The committee—to be composed of parents, teachers, administrators, a broad section of community members and individuals with expertise in environmental and land use matters—would hold public meetings and seek comment on what should be done with the school site. This could range from keeping the school open to making classroom space available for other purposes.

The recommendations would be forwarded to the board of trustees for the final decision.

Taylor told the trustees it would be best to enact such a policy now because "we are still predicting diminishing enrollment and also a diminishing budget. The necessity for closing a school may be upon you.

"This question will come up and it will come up next year," he told the board.

If the policy is already established, the trustees could "avoid the emotionalism of the time" that would arise if the policy were written while a particular school faced possible closure.

Taylor said Wednesday that enrollment at Carmelo School is now 136 students. There are 168 pupils at Woods School. Both campuses have seven teachers and a part-time librarian.

If enrollment patterns continue for the next few years as they are expected to, the pupil population "could hit 100 at Carmelo and 120 or so at Woods" by the fall of 1980, Taylor said.

At that point, the trustees might consider having the students absorbed by neighboring elementary schools—Carmelo students to Tularcitos and Carmel River schools, Woods pupils to Carmel River School alone.

Taylor said there is no crowding in the district except at the high school and the elementary students could be absorbed on the other campuses.

District enrollment in elementary grades has fallen from a high of 2,002 in 1974-75 to 1,794 students this year, a 10.38 per cent drop. Further declines to 1,607 pupils are forecast through 1980-81, a cumulative decline of 19.73 per cent in seven years.

Enrollment is predicted to drop an additional 89 pupils by next fall, a one-year drop of 4.96 per cent, according to district budget figures.

In a related matter, Board President Clayton Neill Jr. suggested that the district have a real estate appraisal made of district land held for future schools. While not proposing that they be sold, he said that "we could be sitting on anywhere from $500,000 to $1 million in property."

Neill said if some land were sold, the money could be used for construction work at the high school.

Bravo, symphony

Dear Editor:

Once in a while, a superlative job is done by an organization which might very easily pass unnoticed. The remarkable work done by the Monterey County Symphony Association in the last two years deserves recognition.

Under the tireless and very energetic direction of its President, Admiral E. J. O'Donnell, the board and the staff have accomplished major goals. The symphony audience has been broadened enormously in both Monterey and Salinas. The fiscal problems of two years ago have been, in large measure, brought into line, although the need for financial support continues. The staff transition caused by the retirement of the loved and respected Vi Behan has been smoothly and strongly handled, with Connie Breien as the new and able manager.

Musically, Maestro Haymo Taeuber has continued the professional standing and development of the orchestra, attempting works this season which have probed new areas of musicianship as well as bringing fresh, lucent interpretations of a few old favorites. The splendid Brahms D Major Concerto in November; the exciting premier of Peterson's First Symphony and Gary Karr's Double Bass version of the Kol Nidrei in January; and the Beethoven last month could only be achieved by a fine professional group under a truly able conductor. The next program, the last of this season, will bring us again the charming, strong, young Gita Kurasik with the Prokofieff Concerto No. 3 in C as a highlight of the year.

Two years ago, the outlook for the Monterey County Symphony was at best rocky, with rough seas ahead. Admiral O'Donnell, his board, the supportive guild, the staff and most of all the orchestra itself under Haymo Taeuber, are to be congratulated for a perilous voyage well and safely accomplished.

Sunset choice

Dear Editor:

Mayor Gunnar Norberg claims (Carmel Pine Cone, April 27) that the Carmel Cultural Commission subcommittee conducted final candidate interviews for the Sunset Center director's job without the knowledge of the City Council subcommittee. He asserts that the commission subcommittee (James Gilman, Lewis Heniford and Eben Whittlesey) thereby overstepped its advisory role. Furthermore, he states that the council subcommittee (David Hughes and Gunnar Norberg) missed the interviews. The record should be clarified.

The only candidate interviews by the Carmel Cultural Commission occurred the evening prior to the final interviews of the candidates by the City Council. All members of the cultural commission participated. A majority of the City Council attended, including Bernard Anderson, David Hughes and Mr. Norberg himself. Indeed, according to the recollection of commission members, Mr. Norberg remained throughout the several hours of interviews and contributed comments to the cultural commission during the proceedings.

The Carmel Cultural Commission and its subcommittee had been charged with reducing the number of applications to be considered by the City Council from over 80 to fewer than 15. A primary criterion throughout the screening was Mr. Norberg's specific direction that serious consideration go only to applicants possessing substantial theater background.

Following that evening of interviews, the Carmel Cultural Commission forwarded the reduced list, as charged. The City Council the next morning interviewed any candidate it cared to consider. It chose Mr. Richard Tyler, 4-1, with Mr. Norberg dissenting.

This record indicates that the Carmel Cultural Commission carefully and successfully maintained an advisory role.

About Scots

Dear Editor:

The Scottish Society of the Monterey Peninsula is gathering historical and biographical records of the many Scotsmen who have helped make this region what it is—from the middle of the last century into our times.

Names like Jacks and Work, Harper and Macmillan, have stood out with distinction, and still continue to do so. The many "Macs" who married into Spanish-Mexican families have their place in history also.

For personal memories or family records, the Scottish Society would be most grateful—either in written form to be photocopied or in individual interviews. Correspondence with the Society, at Box 2081, Carmel, 93921, will be acknowledged at once and arrangements made for this tribute to our forbears.

Enchanted village, pt. II

by Al Eisner

WHILE CITIES and counties all over California are making plans to drastically cut back services and personnel if the Jarvis-Gann property tax initiative (Proposition 13) should pass next month, Carmel's city fathers have made no plans to compensate for the effects on the Village. In their opinion, there wouldn't be any effect.

The question arose Monday night at the regular meeting of the council.

Opinion

Mayor Gunnar Norberg stated that the initiative presented no problem. The other councilmen agreed.

Nobody in the audience, however, asked why this was true. Why should Carmel be immune?

Quite simply, it's because of the huge amount of money raised by the motel tax and by sales taxes in the commercial district. They account for approximately 70 per cent of the city's operating budget.

During the 1976-77 fiscal year, for example, sales and use taxes amounted to $634,000; the hostelry tax contributed $469,000; business licenses and permits netted another $200,000; and property taxes on business property brought in another $250,000. When one considers that the total city budget was $2.1 million, it is obvious that the thriving business district really pays the freight for the lucky residents of Carmel.

When the county assessor came through Carmel and virtually doubled assessments a couple of years ago, the city was able to chop the property tax rate in half, because it didn't need any more money. It was slashed from $1.07 per $100 of assessed valuation to 55 cents per $100. Last year it was cut even further, to 50 cents per $100 of assessed valuation.

With sales and hostelry taxes providing a gusher of additional revenues during the current fiscal year, there is talk around City Hall that the property tax could be eliminated entirely. Since the primary effect of Jarvis-Gann would be to limit the amount of revenues that could be raised by cities and counties, one can readily see why Carmel would scarcely be affected.

SHOULDN'T WE PAUSE, however, and reflect on the meaning of the above analysis?

To me, and to many others, it means that the residents of Carmel enjoy a high level of municipal services—including the finest police and fire protection in the world—and that they enjoy these services almost tax free.

Our neighbor, Monterey, already has taken action to counteract the effects of Jarvis-Gann. It has raised the motel tax, sharply increased business license fees and made provisions to cut back sharply personnel and services if Prop. 13 passes. The city council said they intend to keep the newly instituted taxes whether or not Jarvis-Gann passes, and that they would reduce property taxes if surpluses resulted.

IN A SENSE, this could be considered a continuation of last week's column in which I stated that even on crowded holiday weekends, life in the residential district of Carmel was more than tolerable . . . matter of fact, it's downright heavenly.

It becomes even more tolerable for the residents of Carmel when they can revel in the beauty and serenity of their enchanted village and not be required to cough up a lot of tax dollars to pay for it.

FOOTNOTE: There is one big question mark that might have been overlooked by the City Council. What will be the effect of Jarvis-Gann on the Harrison Memorial Library?

Approximately half of the library's budget is provided by the county. That's because the library serves residents from the areas surrounding Carmel. The revenues are computed on a very complex formula, but basically they are intended to compensate the city for the services provided to county residents.

Monterey County is running scared because of Jarvis-Gann. Nobody in Salinas is willing to talk about the subsidy to Carmel's library. It is entirely possible, however, that these funds could be cut sharply. After all, providing library services could be considered a luxury when the county contemplates cutting back on law enforcement and other basic services.

The funds could be made up by increasing city property taxes. Or, funds could be sought from other sources. The question, however, still remains open.

FOR FIVE years, I have followed the expanding collection of bumper stickers on one particular car in Carmel. In that time, the proliferation has spread from the bumper, over the roof and to the rear. The only thing is, if reprimanded by our animal control officer for honking in the wee hours, just how would you spank a goose?

I ALWAYS enjoy browsing through Carmel city ordinances. Some of them are pretty interesting, especially when you think of what must have gone on in the chambers to generate them. I wonder if any of those women staggering around town on those platform shoes know that they not only look like giraffes wearing two-by-fours, but that one of our ordinances makes any heel over 1.5 inches high illegal? (Come to think of it, some fellows might be made aware of it also.)

County planners decide

No early environmental review for C.V. Ranch

AN OKLAHOMA LAND development company began construction of an 18-hole golf course on the Carmel Valley Ranch property Friday after work was halted briefly because a grading permit for the work was issued "prematurely."

An afternoon meeting between project coordinator Kaye Chandler and Monterey County Zoning Administrator Robert Slimmons cleared the last hurdles and bulldozers began leveling land for the first fairway of the golf course.

Meanwhile, detailed environmental information for the first two phases of residential construction on the 1,700-acre ranch will not be required until a tentative map for 160 units is considered, the commission decided on Wednesday of last week. Each phase provides for construction of 80 units.

The planning department staff and several Carmel Valley residents had asked that the information be provided before the preliminary map on the proposed units was cleared. The commission voted 4-2 against that request, approving a negative declaration of environmental impact.

Carmel Valley Ranch Inc., a subsidiary of Landmark Lands Inc., of Oklahoma City, Okla., must provide complete data on its proposed on-site sewage treatment plant and information about water supply and needed road improvements before the planned project can proceed.

Chandler said Friday that those and other studies already are underway. He estimated that it will be two to three months before the tentative project map is submitted for a public hearing.

According to Lynne Mounday, a staff member in the environmental section of the planning department, the developers will have to provide complete information on the sewage treatment plant; a description of all road improvements, impacts on roads and future needs; a geological report locating the Tularcitos fault on the ranch property; a soil stability report for subdivision areas; sketches of drainage work to be done because of increased runoff from the developed property; preliminary landscape plans, including details on plant species to be used; a map of the 100-year floodplain line; an estimate of the amount of grading to be done; letters from all school districts affected by the increase in residential population; and an update from the county staff on the cumulative effects of the ranch and other developments on Carmel Valley.

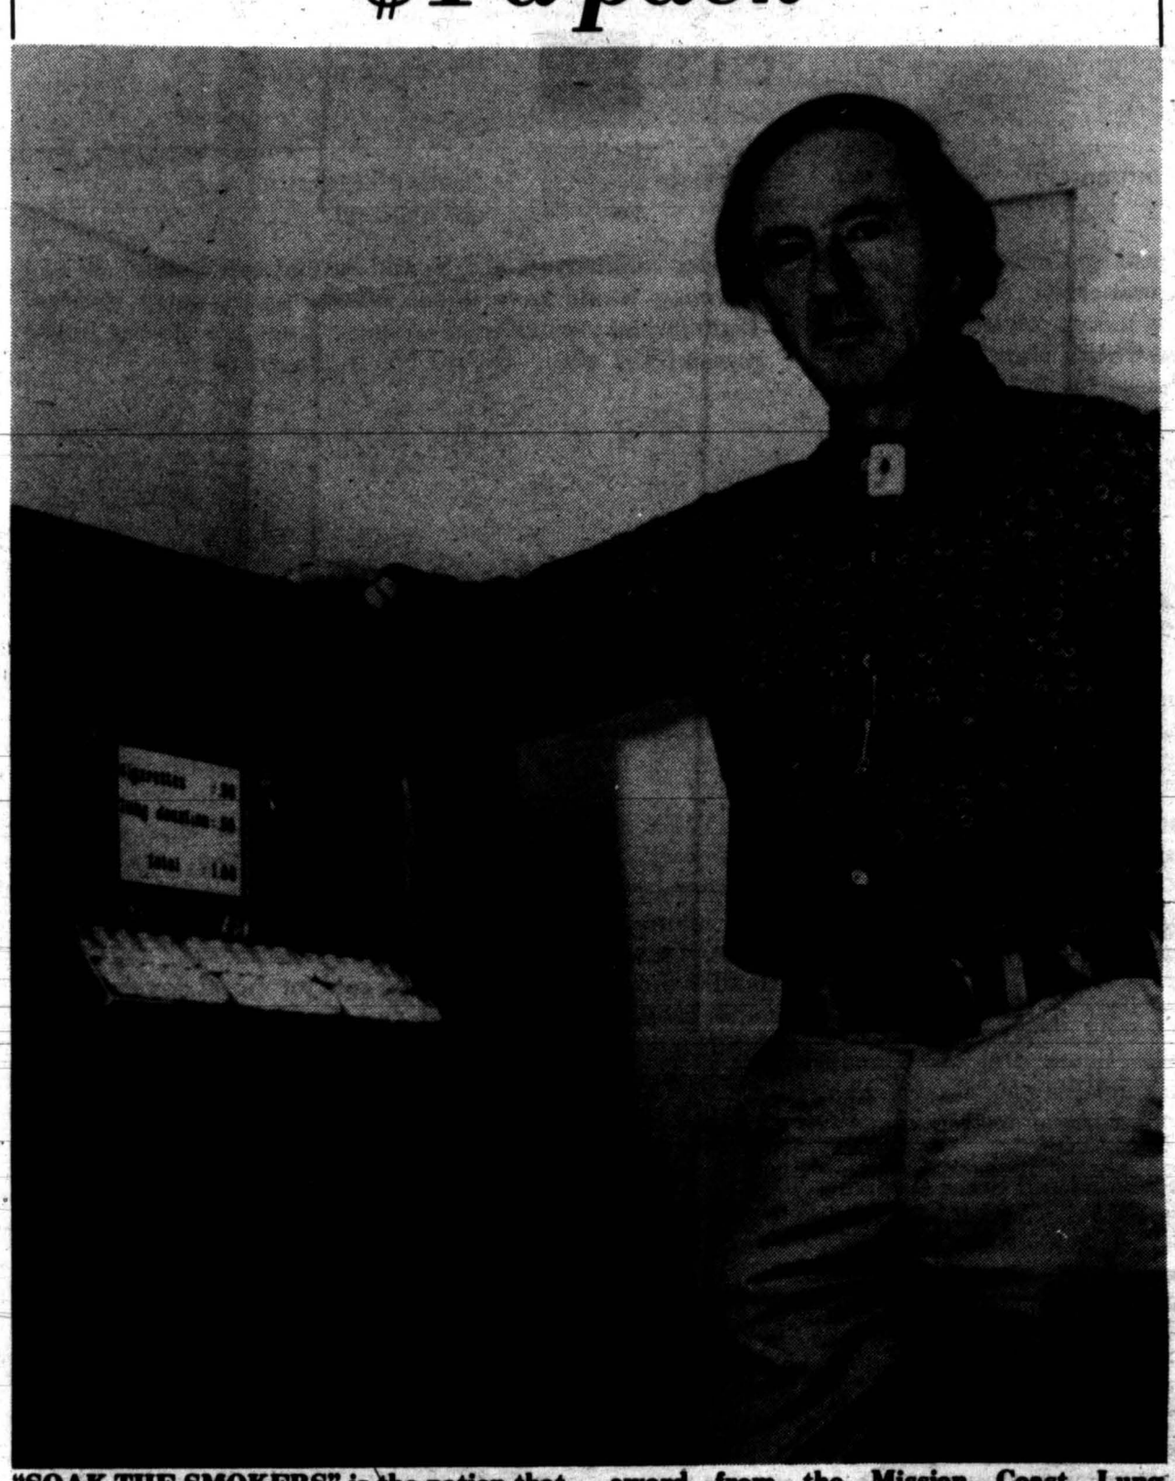

The information must be available to the county in time for a review before a public hearing on the tentative map.

TWO OF THE MAJOR issues under consideration are a source of water for the project and an acceptable method for disposing of residential sewage.

The Carmel Valley Ranch Specific Plan says only that the project "will utilize existing and proposed wells on the property as well as reclaimed water" for domestic consumption and irrigation.

$1 a pack

"SOAK THE SMOKERS" is the notion that led H. E. "Bud" Allen to install this cigarette vending machine back in 1974. Allen, owner and manager of La Playa Hotel in Carmel, charges $1 a pack and gets it. A nonsmoker, Allen has donated almost $6,000 in machine revenues to lung and cancer charities. In April, he received an award from the Mission Coast Lung Association for his outstanding fund-raising efforts. All tolled, some 12,000 packs have been sold from the machine at the hotel. It all goes to prove that those nicotine slaves will pay almost any price for a smoke. (Michael Stang photo)

Pebble Beach lists profit

The Pebble Beach Corp. has reported record first-quarter sales and earnings. The announcement was made following the company's annual meeting in San Francisco on April 26.

Net income for the first quarter increased 13 per cent to $860,000 or 55 cents per common share, as compared with $761,000 or 48 cents per common share for the first quarter of last year.

'Speed bumps' are needed, says Carmel councilman

CARMEL City Councilman Howard Brunn wants things that go bump in the street.

Those well-placed trees and darting squirrels are not adequately slowing down motorists here, he said at Monday's City Council meeting.

"The city should investigate the possibility of putting bumps in the street," Brunn said. "Stop signs don't seem to be doing the job."

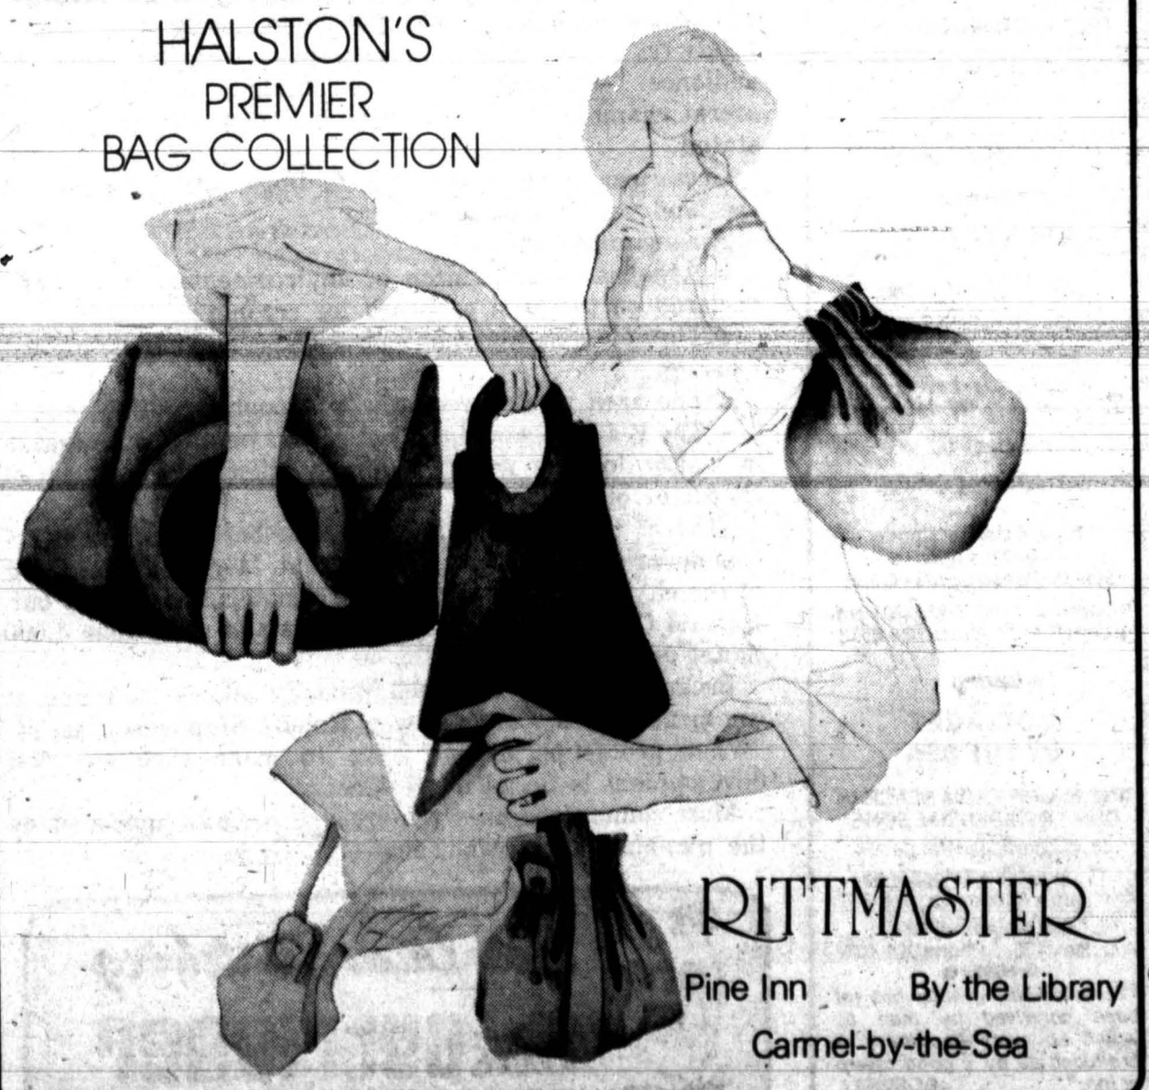

As a result of Brunn's inquiry, the City Council asked City Administrator Jack Collins and City Attorney George Brehmer to study the "legal and practical feasibility" of the bumps.

The speed bumps should be permanent, such as those located at Carmel High School, Monterey Peninsula College and Del Monte Lodge, Brunn said.

"They will probably break a few shock absorbers, but the bumps will slow down drivers, young and old," Brunn said.

The bumps should be tested on a few city streets such as Junipero, San Antonio and Ocean Avenue, Brunn suggested after the meeting. "They should be placed where the most accidents occur," he said.

Aimed at sophomores

Trustees approve new VD education

SOPHOMORES at Carmel High School will be given comprehensive information about venereal disease under a program adopted by the district board of trustees last week.

The three-day educational program will include lectures, films and peer counseling.

Venereal disease education for all students is required by state law beginning next fall. Health teacher Richard Fletcher said he will add the material to his health class curriculum this spring and hopes to reach all sophomores through physical education and driver education classes before the end of the school year. The program would go into full swing next fall.

According to information presented to the trustees, one student in five nationwide will contract VD before graduating from high school. An estimated 2.5 million persons get the diseases each year in the United States, with teenagers, aged 15 to 19, having the second highest incidence of VD after young adults, aged 20 to 24.

Fletcher pointed out that there are no vaccines against venereal diseases—syphillis, gonorrhea and herpes—so that "education may well be the only form of prevention we have to meet the problem."

He said the VD program work he has already done showed that most students know "almost nothing" about the diseases. The focus of the high school program will be to discuss how the diseases are transmitted, what agencies and facilities are available to help students who contract VD and to explain procedures and treatment processes offered by the different facilities.

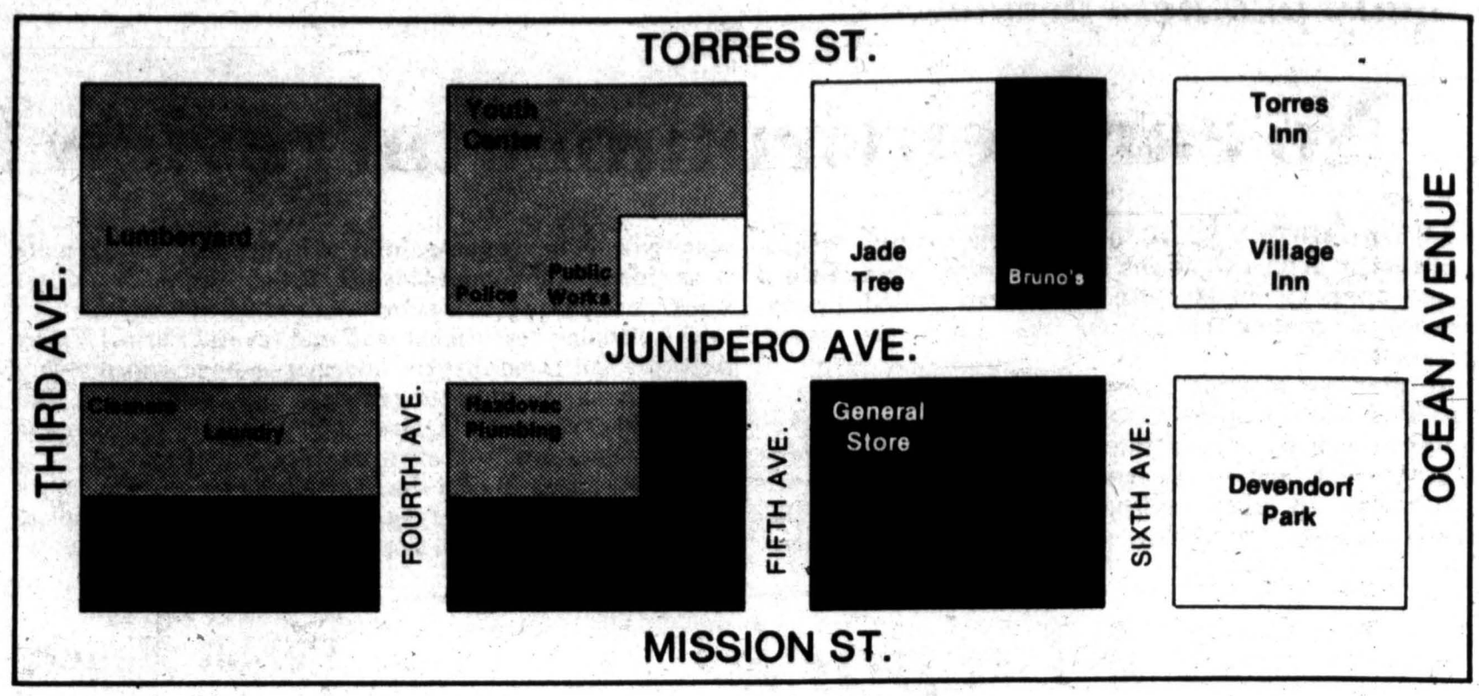

Fletcher emphasized that the VD education would not be a course on human sexuality.

STUDENTS WOULD view films on VD available through the Monterey County superintendent of schools office. Since the films range from those made "in 1929 to 1976," Fletcher said he will screen each one before showing it.

Peer counseling will involve students from "different cliques" who have been trained and can answer questions and help conduct discussions into the nature and responsibilities which the diseases carry, Fletcher said.

Eventually, he told trustees, he expects to see the VD material integrated into an overall health and safety program in the driver education classes. This year he and Sue Williams, who developed the program with him, will meet with physical education classes and some driver education classes to reach all of the current sophomores.

PRESENT C-2 ZONE [general commercial]

C-1-S -- service commercial

C-1-L -- limited commercial

R-4 -- residential district with limited commercial

THIS IS HOW the Carmel Planning Commission would rezone the present general commercial district (C-2). Opposed to the rezoning is J. O. Handley, owner of Carmel Builders Supply on Junipero and Third. Handley says the rezoning could decrease the value of his lumberyard. The service commercial (C-1-S) and limited commercial (C-1-L) rezoning would have minor effects on property owners. Commercial uses allowed in these zones are similar to the present C-2 plan. (Terrill Neely illustration)

Junipero Avenue rezoning

Denouement in R-4 battle near

ONE OF THE longest-running and most hotly contested rezoning projects in Carmel's history is scheduled to go to a public hearing next month before the Carmel City Council.

The Planning Commission voted unanimously on April 26 to rezone six blocks of the present general commercial district (C-2) along Junipero Avenue. The hearing is scheduled on June 6.

"I've been on the Planning Commission since September. Now, we've finally got something going," said Commissioner Sandy Swain.

But the rezoning proposal actually dates back to July 1977, when Commissioners Leslie Gross and Dr. Donald Davidson presented a minority committee proposal on what was then termed "an alternate pattern of uses in the C-2 zone."

Six blocks on Junipero between Third and Sixth Avenues would be affected. About three of the commercial blocks between Third and Fifth Avenues would become residential districts with limited commercial uses (R-4).

The remaining parcels would be rezoned limited commercial (C-1-L) and service commercial (C-1-S) districts.

MOVES TO rezone the area have angered some property owners who have labeled it "downzoning." They say it would decrease property values because of the limited commercial uses allowed in the zone.

The rezoning attempt is merely to prevent the J. O. Handley lumberyard from being sold for motel development, some property owners and two former mayors told the planning commission at a public hearing on April 19.

Proponents claim the new zone would serve as a buffer between the residential and commercial districts. They say it would provide an area for low-rent apartments. They also say it would prevent tourist-oriented stores from opening along the six-block stretch.

The land use committee presented a report to the commission with findings that recommended the rezoning. Members of that planning commission subcommittee are Davidson, Dorothea Roberts and Eileen Thompson.

Before moving to accept the report, Gross questioned its findings. "In all probability, the findings in this report would be inadequate to sustain this rezoning in court," he said.

Two weeks ago, a real estate broker threatened to sue the city if it downzoned the combined office and apartment building she owns on Junipero Avenue.

Lois Renk Wythe, who sold the agency in September but kept the deed to its offices, made that promise in a letter to the commission. She now lives in Idaho.

Her real estate offices and apartments, however, are earmarked for C-1-S rezoning. Both are permitted uses in that proposed zone. Her property is not being considered for R-4 zoning.

When Gross proposed additional findings to the land use committee report, but did not immediately state them, property owner Melvin Kline spoke angrily from the audience. "We don't want these findings added in some secret chamber. We want them in the public record," he stated.

Gross proceeded to read the findings, later amended to the land use committee report.

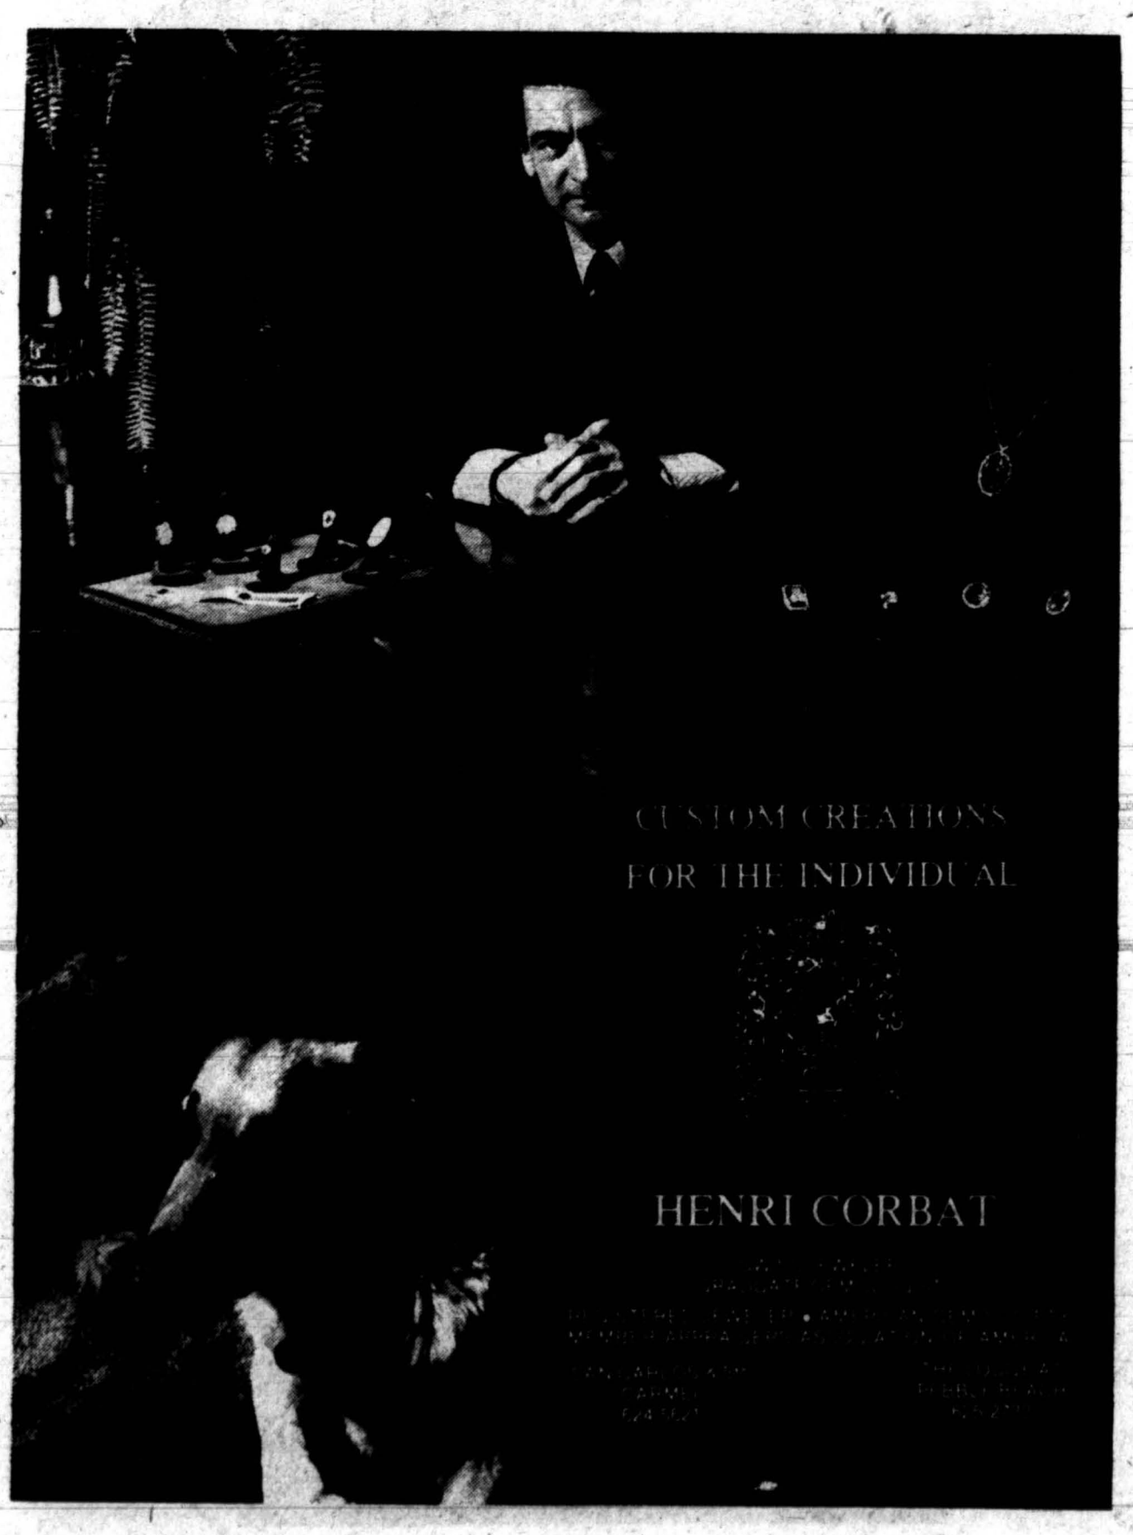

Among those added:

- A negative declaration of environmental impact was declared on the area proposed for rezoning.
- The new zone would provide for low- and middle-income housing.
- The area would become a "reasonable" buffer zone.
- The R-4 zone would restrict motels because an increase in visitor lodging would adversely affect the residential character of Carmel.

"There is an overwhelming number of visitor accommodations in this city," Gross said. More than one-third of the city's total rooming uses are motels, he pointed out. He said Carmel now has 2,987 houses and more than 1,000 motel units.

Because the R-4 zone conditionally allows 26 types of commercial uses, Commissioner Robert Stephenson asked, "What protection do we have to make sure any R-4 development is primarily residential?"

Most commercial uses require use permits approved by the planning commission, answered Gross.

Jarvis bill might cost the county $25 million

FOR THE FIRST time, the Monterey County administration knows exactly what Proposition 13 would cost. It is staggering.

The Jarvis-Gann property tax limit initiative would cost between $17.5 million and $25 million in revenues next year, according to figures developed by the county administrator's office.

All department heads in the county have been instructed to make up alternate budget plans figuring in those reductions in anticipation of the passage of Prop. 13 on June 6.

The county collected $30 million in property tax revenue for fiscal year 1977-78. State and federal income lifted the total budget to just over $90 million.

While County Administrator Richard Andrews told the Pine Cone Tuesday the $25 million cut is unlikely, even the $17.5 million reduction could have major effects on county services in Carmel and the Carmel Valley. He said $17.5 million represents the least amount the county would lose under Prop. 13.

Monterey County supervisors will get the report on Jarvis-Gann budget cuts next Tuesday and may start setting priorities of where they want money trimmed first.

THE REDUCTION guidelines proposed by Andrews are across-the-board cuts from 1977-78 figures, ranging from $1.4 million from the sheriff's department, now budgeted at $4.38 million, to total elimination of some county services.

Under the higher set of reductions, the sheriff's department could be cut $3.4 million under the guidelines put forward by Andrews.

In a letter to department heads, he said, "It is anticipated the board (of supervisors), in reflecting community concerns, will consider service priorities and will determine some budget units should be cut less than others. Thus, it is anticipated there will likely be some shifts in cuts from some budget units to others. However ... it appears there is little flexibility in shifting reductions and increases ... without resulting in completely terminating some units for all practical purposes."

His cover letter also reflects that "many of you will at first react with the conclusion it is impossible to cut even to the minimum, let alone the maximum. However ... somehow we must and will adjust if Prop. 13 passes."

Andrews said no specific cuts have yet been made by department heads nor is he asking them to make up a "Jarvis budget." He said the county will begin budget considerations on June 27, three weeks after the primary election.

A SECOND property tax relief measure on the ballot, Proposition 8 (the Behr bill), would cut property taxes by 30 per cent and take welfare, Medicare and Medi-Cal costs off the county tax rolls. It would fund these cuts by using the state budget surplus of more than $3 billion.

Shaggy friend

A SHAGGY tourist and his best friend peer out the window while dad drives the van down Ocean Avenue. Staff photographer Michael Stang caught this priceless shot Saturday. Little Herby Gordon, his family and his dog "Tripod," a sheep dog-terrier cross, had driven up from Los Angeles. As a pup, Tripod lost a leg but veterinarians were able to save his life and he has adapted well, walking on all threes, according to the Gordons.

previous variance had been granted by the water board.

The technical advisory committee consists of representatives from environmental groups, sanitary district residents and groups such as the city of Carmel and homeowners' associations.

Their general endorsement of recycling came at the end of a three-hour meeting during which past district efforts and recommendations to reduce or eliminate discharge into the bay were discussed.

MOSER, A FORMER district director who represents the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, suggested that the Odello artichoke fields be explored as a site for wastewater disposal.

He said the 80-acre eastern parcel could be acquired and several diked ponds developed where treated water could be pumped and allowed to filter into the water table. Moser noted that the land is at the mouth of the Carmel River. Concerns about a possible reduction in well water quality would not be as important there as upstream, he said, because water downstream is poor because of higher mineral content.

Cattle could graze on the land as the water pumping rotates from one pond to another on a phased basis, Moser said. Any excess water could be pumped over to the 130 acres of Odello West, already owned by the State Department of Parks and Recreation.

Moser said that property "is just awaiting a use acceptable to people."

He proposed that the natural purifying action of reeds and water plants—demonstrated in Australia and elsewhere—be used by creating a wildlife refuge for waterfowl on the land.

Between percolation at Odello East and plant action at Odello West, "I predict acceptable quality water," Moser said.

He also noted that the additional water filtering into the aquifer at the mouth of the river could act as a barrier to saltwater intrusion. Intrusions can occur when the water table is lowered by excessive well pumping.

Norberg gets list of priorities

CARMEL MAYOR Gunnar Norberg will get a crack at revamping a list of planning priorities compiled by the city staff last week.

The mayor objected to the list that placed one of his pet proposals at the bottom. The proposal would establish minimum distances between tourist-oriented businesses.

Although a date has not been set, the mayor soon will meet with the new planning commission chairman scheduled to be appointed May 17.

The council voted 4-0 to allow Norberg to confer. Councilman Helen Arnold was absent.

The list, designating 13 special planning problems the commission is assigned to tackle, was compiled by City Administrator Jack Collins and Planning Director Bob Griggs.

Norberg sharply disagreed with the placement of some priorities.

"There are some items that require action before it's too late," Norberg said.

New height restrictions

Commissioner Eileen Thompson.

GROSS QUESTIONED whether the proposed lot coverage restrictions would be effective. "I don't know if it will reduce the visual impact enough to make it worth the effort," he said.

The new scale could lead to legal problems, said Griggs. "Remember, you must give equity under the law to all persons regardless of their lot sizes," he said.

"No matter what we do, there will always be squabbles in Carmel about large homes," added Cunningham, who sat in on the meeting.

The resolution also recommends new side yard setback limits. Again, these limits are not applicable to houses on 4,000-square-foot lots. Most Carmel homes will still have to observe a three-foot minimum.

For larger lots, however, side yard setbacks would be equal to 10 per cent of the length of the front property line.

The resolution further recommended cutting allowed fence heights in half in some cases. The City Code presently allows eight-foot fences. The commission has called for four-foot front fences, and six-foot limits on rear and side fences.

THE MORATORIUM could begin immediately if a minimum of four city councilmen vote for it. When the March moratorium effort by the council failed, then-Councilman Anderson introduced a policy statement that granted the planning commission authority to deny permits for "large homes."

Since then, the commission delayed 15 permit requests because of its study.

Property owners questioned the commission's right to stall their permits. City Attorney George W. Brehmer warned on two occasions that the City Council walked a legal tightrope by detaining the permits.

None of the permits are now being held up, according to Cunningham. Eight permits were granted. Four were withdrawn by the applicants for redesigning. Three others expired. Applications expire 90 days after they are filed. Cunningham said the expirations could not be blamed on the planning commission delay alone.

New superintendent to visit

Dr. Carl E. Wilsey, the new superintendent of Carmel Unified School District, will be the guest at a reception Saturday in his honor.

Hosted by the Padre Parents' Club, the reception will start at 4 p.m. at the home of Bobbie Watson. The home is on Scenic Drive, five doors south of Eighth Avenue.

Tickets are $5 each and proceeds benefit the Carmel High School Scholarship and Book Fund. Reservations are due today and can be obtained by phoning Lacy Faia, 624-4380. Wine and hors d'oeuvres will be served. The reception will last until 7 p.m.

Wilsey, 49, was named April 12 to succeed resigning Superintendent Harris Taylor. Wilsey is a professor of education at the University of Northern Colorado in Greeley, Colo.

On Friday, Wilsey is scheduled to be introduced to the faculty and administrators in the school district.

CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA
PLANNING COMMISSION
RESOLUTION NO. 78-12

WHEREAS, on March 6, 1978 the City Council requested the Planning Commission to study large houses being built within the residential district; and,

WHEREAS, the Planning Commission has diligently studied the matter and recognizes that a problem does exist; and,

WHEREAS, a 60-day period for study does not provide the necessary time to develop a complete study and to develop the ordinances necessary to control the problem; and,

WHEREAS, additional time is needed to prepare such ordinances, hold public hearings and make any changes needed to such ordinances;

NOW, THEREFORE, THE PLANNING COMMISSION OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA DOES RESOLVE:

That the City Council under Government Code Section 65858 declare a limited moratorium within the residential district to protect the public health, safety and welfare of its citizens.

IT IS FURTHER RESOLVED that the following regulations or standards be established for the moratorium:

1. That Section 1310.7 "HEIGHT LIMITATION" be temporarily deleted during the moratorium and the following standard established:

HEIGHT LIMITATION. Buildings within the residential district shall not exceed two stories in height nor have an average building height above natural grade adjacent to the exterior walls of twenty-four (24') feet. In addition, no portion of the structure shall exceed twenty-four (24') feet in height above natural grade adjacent to the exterior walls, or exceed a maximum height of twenty (20') feet to the plate line of the building. The height limitation shall be exclusive of fireplace chimneys which shall not exceed a height of thirty (30') feet above the natural grade adjacent thereto. Variances under Section 1341.2 of the Municipal Code may be applied for to a maximum height of thirty-three (33') feet, subject to the applicant submitting a topographical map indicating that excessive slope creates a hardship of the land and that existing development on adjacent sites within the block, or an adjacent block facing the site has buildings which are equal to or exceed the height of the variance requested.

2. That Section 1310.73 "BUILDING COVERAGE LIMITATION" be temporarily deleted during the moratorium and the following standard established:

BUILDING COVERAGE LIMITATION. Building coverage shall be determined by the square foot area of a site and by the number of stories in the building. The following table shall be the maximum allowable coverage of a building site:

Site Size (sq. ft.)	One Story (per cent)	Two Story (per cent)
4,000 or less	40	35
4,001 to 5,000	38	34
5,001 to 6,000	36	33
6,001 to 7,000	34	32
7,001 to 8,000	32	31
8,001 and over	30	30

Building coverage shall mean all of the square foot area contained within the exterior walls of a building, any roofed porches or decks and any roofed structure supported on posts and beams. Windows with a minimum dimension of eighteen (18") inches above the floor, and eaves may extend eighteen (18") inches beyond the structural support members or exterior walls and shall not be counted as building coverage. Decks not exceeding the height of the first floor level of the building shall not be counted as coverage if the floor area of the deck does not exceed 10 per cent of the allowable coverage of the building site, and such decking material consists of spaced decking or other decking material which does not provide a weatherproof barrier which could be considered or come under the classification of a roof, and when the deck area is unroofed and open to the sky.

3. That Section 1310.75 "SIDE YARDS" be temporarily deleted during the moratorium and the following standard established:

SIDE YARDS. Side yards shall be provided for all buildings in the residential district and such side yards shall be determined by the length of the front property line. Side yards shall be equal to 10 per cent of the length of the front property line except for 40x100 foot lots which shall have a minimum setback of three (3) feet. A property owner may at his discretion transfer 50 per cent of the required side yard setback to one side yard or the other, but in no case shall a side yard be reduced to less than three (3) feet. The only encroachment that shall be allowed into a minimum three (3) foot side yard setback are fireplace chimneys or eaves extending not more than eighteeen (18") inches into such setback and masonry stoops and stairs which may extend to the property line. Any building or portion of a building exceeding fifteen (15') feet in height above natural grade adjacent to the exterior walls of a building shall provide a five (5) foot minimum setback to that portion of the structure exceeding fifteen (15') feet in height.

When a corner lot of record is combined with an adjoining inside lot of record and resubdivided into two (2) building sites, no building shall be erected or maintained nearer to the street than ten (10') feet.

In determining side yard setbacks for irregular shaped lots, the front and back yard shall be combined and an average taken from the two dimensions and 10 per cent of this average shall determine what the side yards shall be.

4. That Section 1310.76 "REAR YARD" be temporarily deleted during the moratorium and the following standard established:

REAR YARD. A rear yard of not less than three (3') feet shall be provided for every building in the residential district, and no structure or portion thereof exceeding fifteen (15') feet in height above the natural grade at the rear property line shall be built closer to the rear property line than fifteen (15') feet.

5. That Section 1350.17 "BUILDING COVERAGE DEFINITION" be temporarily deleted as it would apply to the residential district and the recommended standard under item 2 of this resolution would define building coverage.

6. That Section 1350.21 "BUILDING HEIGHT-RESIDENTIAL DEFINITION" be temporarily deleted and recommendation under item 1 of this resolution would define building height.

7. That Section 1351.18 "YARD" (definition) be temporarily deleted during the moratorium as it would apply to the residential district and the following standard established:

YARD. An unoccupied space on a building site, which space (except as hereinafter provided) shall be open and unobstructed from the ground upward. Required yard dimensions shall be measured between the property line of the building site and that part of the building or structure nearest to said property line. The following structural features may occupy required yard spaces and will not be deemed encroachments thereon: Eaves and/or one outside fireplace chimney projecting not over eighteen (18") inches; unenclosed masonry porches or stoops at an elevation no higher than the ground floor of the building and projecting into the side yard to the property line; unenclosed porches and stoops at an elevation no higher than the ground floor of the building and projecting into the front or rear setback but not to exceed 10 per cent of the allowable coverage of the building site, and when not extending more than 50 per cent into the required front and rear yard setback; walls or fences not over six (6') feet in height above the natural grade at any point adjacent to said fence along the rear and side property lines within fifteen (15') feet of the front property line; and walls or fences not over four (4') feet in height along the front property line or the side property within the first fifteen (15') feet of the front property line.

8. That Section 1310.01 g. "PERMITTED USES" be temporarily deleted during the moratorium and the following standard established:

Fences and walls not over six (6') feet in height above the natural grade at any point adjacent to said fence along the rear and side property lines within fifteen (15') feet of the front property line; walls or fences not over four (4') feet in height along the front property line or the side property line within the first fifteen (15') feet of the front property line.

Top high school scholars honored

Theresa Thomas, a senior, and Don Berta, a junior, were chosen the outstanding students at Carmel High School for 1977-78 at the second annual Academic Excellence Celebration on April 16.

The banquet celebration, organized by parents and school employees along the lines of the athletic awards banquets, is designed to recognize students for superior scholastic performance.

Theresa is the daughter of Judge and Mrs. Donald Thomas. She lives with her mother in Carmel. Don is the son of Leo and Mary Berta and lives with his father at the Berta Ranch in Carmel Valley.

Both students received $15 gift certificates from the Thunderbird Bookstore in addition to winning recognition for their academic performances.

Don, although he is a junior, will graduate in June.

Also honored at the banquet were members of the California Scholarship Federation, an organization for high school students who achieve and maintain high academic standards.

Representative Leon Panetta (D-Monterey) was the guest speaker at the banquet.

The program also included choral presentations by the Barbershop Quartet and Girls Ensemble of the high school, directed by Tina Paradiso.

The event was jointly sponsored by the Padre Parents, California Scholarship Federation, the Carmel High School administration and staff and the Carmel Rotary Club.

CSF members recognized and honored at the banquet include President Amy Erickson, Vice President Sue Morris, Secretary-Treasurer Mona Karadsheh and members:

Claire Arnal, Rebekah Barrish, Don Berta, Ingrid Brook-Kothlow, Diane Brussell, Misty Carlin, Maryn Chatwin, Pam Clemens, Kathy Coakley, Mike Colvin, Beth Copsey, Elizabeth Drye, Robert Dunn, Laura Edmonds, Dorothy Eldridge, Lynne Fenton, Clark Frasier, Chris Fromm, Cynthia Frost, Gail Frost, Roger Fulton,

Voter registration deadline

Voters have until Monday to register for the June 6 primary election, where the fate of two major property tax limitation proposals, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management Agency and nominees for all statewide offices will be decided.

Any U.S. citizen who is 18 and a resident of Monterey County is eligible to vote. The registration deadline Monday is at 5 p.m.

Individuals who have not registered may mail in a postcard registration form. The forms are available at post offices, banks, libraries and some realty offices.

Portraits of Francois at Tantamount Theatre

Portraits of Francois by Martha Pearson will be shown in the Green Room Gallery of the Tantamount Theatre, Middle Canyon Road, Carmel Valley, through May 31.

Francois Martin should need no introduction to local residents or visitors who attend the Tantamount Theatre where he has greeted audiences each weekend since 1960.

A professional puppeteer and actor, Francois and his late partner, John Ralph Geddis, bought the beautiful little theater in 1956 and opened it to the public again in 1960. Now nearly 70, Francois continues to present classic films Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings and charm his guests during the traditional complimentary coffee break at intermission.

Photographer Martha Pearson is also a linguist who has worked as a translator in Washington, D.C. Now a resident of the Monterey Peninsula, she began photography in 1959, studied at the Fishback School of Photography and with Lou Bernstein and Arnold Newman.

Her portraits have been exhibited at the Hunt Foundation Library, Fullerton; Laguna Beach Festival of the Arts; Monterey County Fair Photographic Exhibit; Dibert Gallery; Friends of Photography Members' Show; and at the Tantamount Theatre. She works as a portrait photographer.

Watercolors and drawings by Misha Pavlov will also be on view in the Green Room Gallery. An afternoon champagne reception to meet the artists is planned Sunday, May 7, 2 to 5 p.m.

Open house at Marine Lab

The California Department of Fish and Game will open its Marine Culture Laboratory, nine miles south of Carmel on Highway 1, to the public for its annual open house Saturday, May 6, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The Marine Culture Laboratory is an experimental research facility which investigates techniques for culturing Dungeness crabs, red abalone and Pismo clams. Unlike a hatchery, experimentation at the lab is strictly on a small-scale basis. As culture techniques are perfected, larger laboratories or hatcheries take up the task of producing large numbers of shellfish.

Department personnel will be on hand to explain the operations of the lab, and other Fish and Game projects in central California will be represented by displays of work with sea otters, fish and shellfish.

Current Studio production is a madcap murder mystery

By BARBARA MOUNTREY

HUMOR AND suspense run side by side at a mad pace through Catch Me If You Can, the current production at the Studio Theatre/Restaurant. Director Bill Asp keeps the timing taut and the action move-on-move through this tortuous tale of missing persons, impersonations, stabbing, poisoning, disappearing bodies—and wonderfully funny dialogue.

Theater review

Center of the action is Daniel Corban, whose new bride, Elizabeth, is missing—unless the woman who says she is Elizabeth really is. The priest says she is, and the inspector is almost sure she is, but there are a few nagging questions about his insurance and her inheritance....

Gregory Niebel turns in a fine performance as Corban, driven almost crazy by the apparent plot against his life. It is his tension that supports the mood of the whole play, and he does not let it down for a moment. By turns distraught and elated, as the weight of evidence swings away from and again toward him, he pulls the whole audience along with him (even a large, slightly rowdy dinner group became hushed and attentive).

As Inspector Levine, cop of the Catskills, Alexey Lopukhin is very funny indeed, wearily exasperated with the hapless Corban, but always in control. Even as he reassures each side in turn, he subtly conveys the suspicion that he is really just leading them all along. He delivers the dry Jewish witticisms without descending into ethnic caricature, playing Levine as a complex character rather than a mere borscht belt comedian.

Sylvie Lestrade is an enigmatic Elizabeth. Who is she really, and what is her game? The cool poise with which she counters Corban's attacks is almost enough to convince one, as it apparently convinces Levine.

As her accomplice, Steve Dirk is silkily menacing, clearly enjoying the phony piety of his role as priest. It takes a good actor to play a good actor, and Dirk ably represents in microcosm the boxes-within-boxes structure of the play as a whole.

Jim Jensen makes a delightful local character out of Sidney the delicatessen man, including a classic double take when he realizes that he hasn't been shot after all (just before he gets stabbed). How delightful it is when accomplished actors are willing to do bit parts as well as leads!

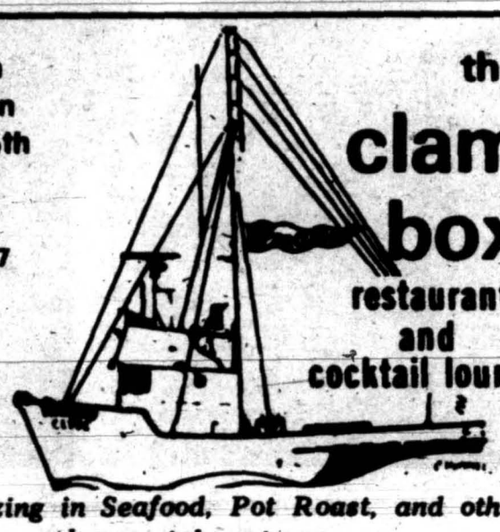

Bob Berman, as Everett Parker, and Suzan Schwantz, as his dippy model girlfriend, make brief but effective appearances.

The set, by Alfredo Valdez, is a reasonable representation of a rustic hideaway, the outside spaces conveyed by glimpses through the door and well-placed sound effects. The lighting, by Alexey Lopukhin, distinguishes day from night, which is all that's asked of it.

Catch Me If You Can plays Fridays and Saturdays at 8:30 p.m. and Sundays at 7:30 p.m., with dinner served an hour and a half before the show. Catch it if you can.

Karasik to perform in symphony concerts

Pianist Gita Karasik will be the guest soloist in the final concerts of the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra 1977-78 season Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, May 7-9.

The concert will be performed Sunday at King Hall of the Naval Postgraduate School, Monterey; Monday at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel; and Tuesday at Sherwood Hall, Salinas Community Center, 940 N. Main St., Salinas. All concerts begin at 8 p.m.

Miss Karasik, who performed the West Coast Premiere of Andrew Imbrie's Piano Concerto with the Orchestra in 1976, will play the inspirational Piano Concerto No. 3 by Serge Prokofieff.

The orchestra, under the direction of Maestro Haymo Taeuber, will also open the concert with music for two brass choirs by Giovanni Gabrieli. The concert will conclude with a melodic trip to distant countries: to Finland with the Karelia Suite by Jean Sibelius; to Brazil with Heiter Villa-Lobos's The Little Train of the Caipira; and finally to Hungary with the Hary Janos Suite by Zoltan Kodaly, which calls for the cymbalum, a Hungarian folklore instrument played with hammers on strings. An authentic cymbalum musician has been engaged to accompany the symphony in the piece.

Stone exhibit to open at Village Artistry Gallery

Point Lobos Perspective, an exhibit of new watercolors by Carmel artist William F. Stone Jr., will open with an artist's reception Saturday, May 6, 7-9 p.m. at Village Artistry, Dolores between Ocean and Seventh, Carmel.

Stone's annual one-man exhibits have often been based on his paintings made on visits to other parts of the world. This year he has chosen to capture the beauties closer to home, at Point Lobos State Reserve.

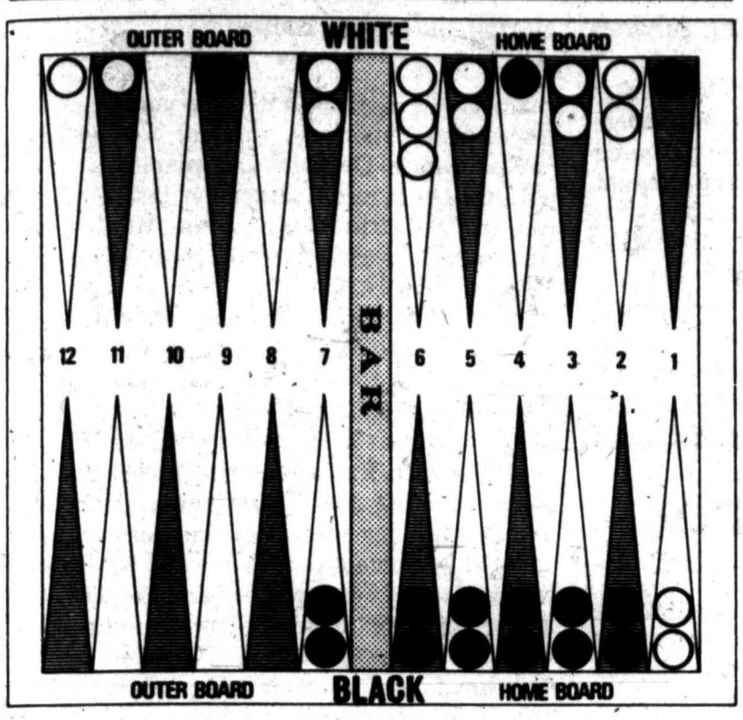

Stone, who is the head of the art department at Carmel High School, does his drawings on location with a waterproof pen, superimposing one image over another, then returns to the studio to add the watercolors in overlapping tones.

In addition to teaching at the high school, Stone has taught in the Carmel Adult School and at the Carmel Foundation and has given collage demonstrations and art history lectures for local civic groups for many years.

Backgammon

By OMAR SHARIF

Black rolls 4-3. How should he play?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

At first sight this might not be a problem. Black has two White runners trapped behind a prime, and he can hit another White blot with this roll. It seems that there is a good possibility of winning a gammon no matter what Black does.

Indeed, it would appear that Black can almost make any move he chooses and still win handily, and that could very well be the case. But there are certain circumstances in which the Black game could collapse.

Black has a runner on the White 1-point that is trapped behind a broken 5-point prime. If Black uses the 3 to hit a White blot and then takes some other 4, he will have no problem at all for the next two or three rolls. But what if Black does not roll another 3 for some time?

The runner will remain trapped in the White home board. If Black does not come up with another 3, he will run out of moves with his loose men and then he will have to start breaking his prime. If White gets lucky and escapes with his runners while the Black runner is still trapped, or if White succeeds in completing his prime while maintaining his home board, he can win the game.

Admittedly, Black should roll a 3 in the next four or five turns, but there is a big difference between should and must. Remember, each time Black rolls he is a 25-to-11 underdog to get a 3 — each roll bears no relation to the previous rolls.

It is unnecessary for Black to take such a risk. He can assure the win by using the 3 to bring the man on White's 1-point to the 4-point. I don't care which 4 Black chooses to play — it is unlikely to make any difference to the outcome of the game. But if Black does not use the 3 to advance his runner, he almost deserves to lose the game.

Nies presents final Carmel Music Society concert

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

PIANIST CRAIG NIES, winner of the Carmel Music Society's first annual Young California Artists Competition, performed a very musical concert at Sunset Center on Saturday, but not one marked with nuance or real excitement. His program included sonatas by Mozart and Beethoven and, after intermission, a Russian bill of fare whose major work was Prokofiev's Sonata in B-flat.

Preceding the event, John Mockett announced that Nies would be the North American standard bearer at the next Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow, a great honor to be sure. He also called attention to a special benefit concert for the Music Society on May 25 featuring guitarist Michael Newman.

Nies opened the concert with the Mozart Sonata in D, K. 576. In a refreshing change from other recent artists performing Mozart, Nies' was a sprightly and elegant reading. While the work's key, and Mozart's intention, do not bode for a sun-drenched experience, Nies correctly chose sober but airy optimism over the profound scholasticism we hear so often. Mozart's music certainly is profound, but not when a musician sets out to play it that way. From the work's opening horn-call, somewhat reminiscent of the one that opens Eine Kleine Nachtmusik, through its vibrant finale, Nies gave a rich and generous performance, achieving a marvelous wistful quality in the adagio.

In Beethoven's Sonata in F minor, "Appassionata," Nies gave a strong, occasionally impulsive display. The variations of the second movement were tasteful and purposeful. There were moments in the first movement where articulation and pulse became unclear, but there was a certain excitement in the artist's unpredictable impulse. There were glimpses of a future keyboard personality in the finale. But this movement became more relentless than truly dramatic.

The Rachmaninoff Etude-tableau, Op. 39, No. 5 was portrayed as the mini tone poem that it is. The Chopinesque Etude in D-sharp minor by Scriabin was clear but not brilliant. And the Tchaikovsky Dumka, Op. 59 was treated to a skillful, integrated and musical display. This piece is a many-faceted gem, developing an incredible variety of ideas, some sublime and some banal.

A favorite among recitalists is Prokofiev's Sonata No. 7. Nies commanded the surprising rhythms and harmonies of the first movement, advanced a pictorial and atmospheric andante, and played the precipitato precipitously. His encores were March from The Seasons by Tchaikovsky and Prokofiev's Fugitive Vision No. 10.

THE MUSIC SOCIETY brochure describes a most exciting 52nd season featuring at least three top-ranked young artists—violinist Kyung-Wha Chung, pianist Jean-Philippe Collard and soprano Leona Mitchell. In addition, there will be the Pittsburg Chamber Orchestra with guest pianist Andre-Michel Schub and as conductor and soloist none other than the renowned horn virtuoso Barry Tuckwell. The season will conclude with the society's second competition winner, Neil Rutman, who proved himself an excellent artist during the recent contest.

THE CYPRESS TRIO is composed of three area musicians, violinist Welton Lee, cellist James Deutsch and pianist Camille Olaeta. On a rainy afternoon last Sunday, the trio took the stage at the MPC Music Hall for what proved to be a most satisfying concert.

When the three players entered, the atmosphere seemed like that of an informal gathering of friends there for the fun of private musicmaking. For that matter, the playing at the start was not entirely smooth and together. But as the Beethoven Trio in E-flat, Op. 70, No. 2 proceeded, the music increasingly became a genuine performance and the performance was marked by drama, vivid contrasts of dynamics and rhythm and lilting lyricism. This work is contemporary with the Symphony No. 5 and in it Beethoven makes clear his preference for the four-movement, rather than three-movement, form for the piano trio. In an exuberant reading of the final allegro, the playing became a little rough in places and throughout the work the piano tended to dominate the strings.

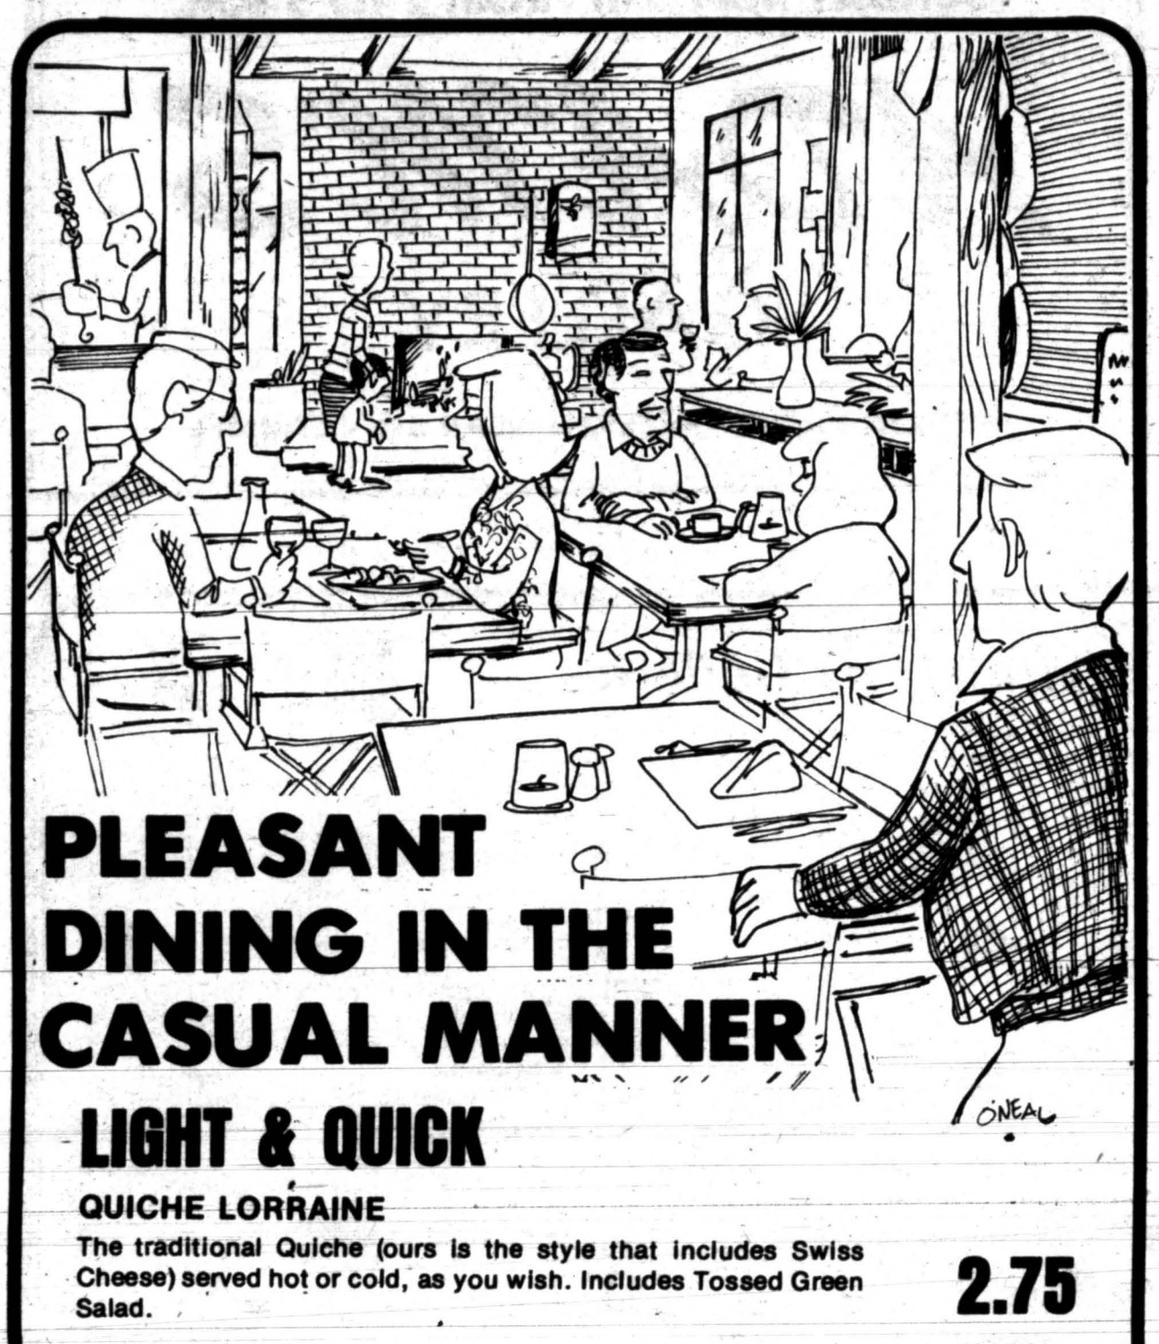

If there was any doubt about the performance quality of the Beethoven, there was none in the Shostakovich Trio in E minor, Op. 67. This work is a masterpiece and the performance was masterful. Deutsch struggled a bit with the opening high cello harmonics, but this was soon forgotten as the work's splendid musical and dramatic effects unfolded and developed. The opening andante begins with a haunting and ominous duet for muted strings and then is animated over a brooding ostinato. The music never ebbs in intensity and strength.

The second movement is an allegro of high drama and a contrasting lyric middle section. It was set off by Lee's blustery fiddling. Solo piano opens the largo with a chord progression straight out of Mussorgsky. The strings are again muted and are lyric and serious. Then follows an incredible sequence of events, both dramatic and lyric, that are now ironic, tender and militant. There are folk elements and harmonic references to the East. The work progresses without break through its final allegretto and closes with those Mussorgskian chords. It was a marvelous reading.

Sunny skies prevailed at intermission and the Smetana Trio in G minor that followed maintained the high performance standards that were established before. The Smetana piece is lovely and most effective, but not of the power and unbroken intensity of the Shostakovich. It makes many references to its folk-style origins and at times is quite melodramatic. It, too, was a treat.

The Cypress played, as an encore, the andante from the great Trio in D minor by Mendelssohn.

Symphony concert at Sunset Monday

By RICHARD TYLER
Director, Sunset Community and Cultural Center

THE MONTEREY County Symphony, under the direction of Haymo Taeuber, will give the final concert of its 32nd season at Sunset Center Monday, May 8, at 8 p.m.

Sunset Center Auditorium is where it all started with the first concert performed May 28, 1947. Actually, an earlier performance was given April 28 at Fort Ord that year, but it was in Carmel that the citizens of the Peninsula had their first opportunity to hear the group of musicians that had banded together to perform orchestral works. The orchestra was organized in the fall of 1946 in Salinas by Lorell McCann, first professor of music at Hartnell College, and the first group of musicians was conducted by devoted amateurs in a county-oriented association.

The 1940s were the romantic days of Carmel. Everyone living here wanted this to be the cultural area. The people gave their talents in many ways to create and develop and support the arts. It was during this time that Bert Herron had developed his concept of a theater. The caliber and diversity of local talent was high. However, with the growth of the orchestra and its commitment to more performances, the first professional conductor, Gregory Millar, was secured for the 1954-55 season. Millar served as conductor for five years followed by Earl Murray and Ronald Ondrejka, each of whom served for one year. John Gosling came from Washington, D.C., to take the post of conductor and remained for six years. Under his leadership the orchestra attained urban classification (orchestras with a gross budget of $50,000 or more), qualifying for a place in the top 100 non-professional orchestras in the United States. When Gosling was called to the Erie Philharmonic, Jan de Jong was hired to fill the breach.

The search for a top-notch conductor of international eminence was rewarded when Haymo Taeuber was chosen in 1968 from 100 applicants from all parts of the United States and abroad. In 1972-73 the orchestra attained Metropolitan classification (orchestras with a gross budget over $100,000). This means more professional musicians were hired with top musicians leading each section.

The orchestra of 70 to 76 members is made up predominantly of local musicians from the Monterey Bay area. Policy has always been to hire local musicians if they have the necessary ability, therefore returning the bulk of the $130,000 musicians' budget to the economy of this area. Still in all, there are not enough local musicians who can pass the tests each year. But those musicians who do come in from San Jose, Santa Clara and even San Francisco often bring their families for the weekend and in that way return to the community much of the salaries they receive.

A regular concert series of six concert sets is played each season in Monterey, Salinas and Carmel. Added to these performances are the "Pops" concert at the Monterey Fairgrounds and four "Concerts for Youth" in Monterey and Salinas.

Plan to attend the symphony's Monday concert in Carmel when pianist Gita Karasik will be the soloist playing the Piano Concerto No. 3 in C by Serge Prokofieff. Phone the symphony office, 624-8511, for more information regarding ticket availability.

ON MAY 8 a Mothers' Day Music Festival will be held in Phoenix and Sun City, Ariz.

The G.P. -- a medical anachronism

Drs. Tocchet and Viken prove patients still like 'cradle-to-grave' care

By KEN PETERSON

ON THE SURFACE Carmel Valley appears to be a developed rural residential community. But at times Doctors Paul Tocchet and Richard Viken must feel they are, figuratively speaking, the only law west of the Pecos.

They operate a sophisticated family practice clinic on Ford Road in Carmel Valley Village, complete with their own emergency room. They also are two of the four doctors treating family medical problems in the 45 miles between Greenfield and Carmel.

And, despite the settled appearance of much of the Valley, its rural heart shows through in odd ways. Where else would a physician scramble through his office looking for a rattlesnake brought in by the snakebite victim? Or wind up staring down the barrels of a 12-gauge shotgun on a housecall? Or have a patient apologize for bothering the doctor about a gash that took 30 stitches to close?

In his nine years of Carmel Valley practice, Tocchet has seen all this and more. Viken joined him as a partner last year to help cope with the growing number of patients in the Valley.

Carmel Pine Cone
Section II

The family practice physician is the present-day successor of the old general practice doctor.

"The G.P. still exists," Tocchet said. "Everybody remembers the man who delivered you, took out your tonsils and took care of you when you were an old man."

The nature of the G.P. has changed over the years, especially in the 1970s. Now there are residencies in family practice aimed at turning out doctors whose specialty is no specialty. Rather, they get broad training in patient care.

Viken, 30, an Oregon native, is a graduate of such a program at the University of Arizona in Tucson. Tocchet, 38, switched from a career he planned as an orthopedic specialist to family practice after he had a chance to work in a U.S. Navy family practice clinic in Monterey.

Opening an office in the "wide open" Carmel Valley also gave the Pennsylvania native a chance to stay on the Peninsula. His training at St. Joseph's and Temple Universities did not specifically prepare him for family practice, but the experience with the Navy gave him incentive to set up his own office.

RELAXING IN HIS office between appointments, Tocchet said, "I feel I met a need out here. I came when the Valley was picking up its growth."

Tocchet is high on the value of family practice doctors.

"If you go to a cardiologist, he's spent so much time learning about the heart you may have a trick knee he's not too familiar with," he said.

DR. RICHARD Viken relaxes in his office between patients. One of the first products of the new medical residency programs in family practice, Viken joined Tocchet a year ago. His training was aimed at preparing him to treat the medical ills of everyone from infants to grandparents.

DR. PAUL TOCCHET gets ready to take the blood pressure of Cliff Williams, one of the patients in his busy Carmel Valley office. Tocchet can handle everything from checkups to emergency surgery in his office, and he and partner Richard Viken make house calls as well. (Michael Stang photos)

Tocchet is quick to admit his own limitations and said if a patient of his needs to go to a specialist he will refer them. But he pointed out that when he treats members of an entire family, his knowledge of their personalities and problems often provides a better way to cure an illness than do lab tests.

"When a patient says he has a stomach ache, I might know without tests what the problem is because of his background," Tocchet said. "I can treat him more as a person than as a scientific exercise."

Viken said it can "save the patient and us a lot of time and money" if they can diagnose the stomach ache as nervous tension because of a family get-together rather than requiring lab tests that might not turn up anything. This insight comes from treating parents and children in the same office and over a period of years.

For cases out of the ordinary, Viken said the doctor has to rely on "kind of a sixth sense. You have to be kind of astute to pick up rare things. Someone comes in with a cold or cough and it doesn't sound quite usual. Then you take X-rays and could find TB or a tumor.

"That's a pleasing thing about family practice. A specialist expects everyone who comes in his office to be rare."

Because they are not specialists, Tocchet said he and Viken do not hesitate to send their patients to specialists when specialized skills are needed.

"As I said to a patient before the energy crisis: which would you rather have for $3,000, a Cadillac or a Ford?" Tocchet said. "If you're not doing something every day, you shouldn't do it at all.

"I don't take care of all the problems. Now everyone accepts that. It's part of the maturation of the physician, to know what you can or can't do."

Patients have matured as well, he said, coming out of "the dark ages" in the 1940s and 1950s.

"Then, you went to the doctor and accepted what he gave you," Tocchet said. "Today when a patient walks in, they ask, 'Why are you giving me that, what will it do?'

"They don't expect a miracle man."

VIKEN SAID the two "do as much as we can to encourage people to realize what kind of problem requires care. It does the doctor and the patients good to make the patient responsible for his own care.

"There is a tendency to get away from responsibility. They think that medicine has so many machines, we can do it all. On the contrary, we try to make people more aware of what they can do for themselves."

Because some of Carmel Valley is rustic in attitude and appearance, more so the farther east you travel, many of their patients have had this attitude—albeit to extremes at times.

"A lot of our patients don't come in except when they are having a heart attack or had a major accident," Tocchet said. "One man came in with a huge cut on his arm. It took me an hour to sew it up. I must have put in 20 or 30 stitches. And he said he was sorry to bother me with it. It's kind of unique."

Snakebite isn't too unusual in any medical practice, but few doctors "have to worry about getting bit by the same snake," he said. "Twice people have come in with the snake that bit them. One guy said he thought a rattler bit him and when I asked how he knew, he said, 'Because it looks like this one,' and pulled out a box with the snake in it. The snake was trying like hell to get out of the box and eventually got loose in the office. We had to clear the place out and catch it."

THE MARCH of Dimes poster girl for Monterey County, eight-year-old Dominique Adoja, intends to cover the entire 30-kilometer walkathon route on Saturday, May 13. Last year, her father John Adoja pushed her while dozens of hikers followed.

Girl from Carmel will lead March of Dimes walkathon

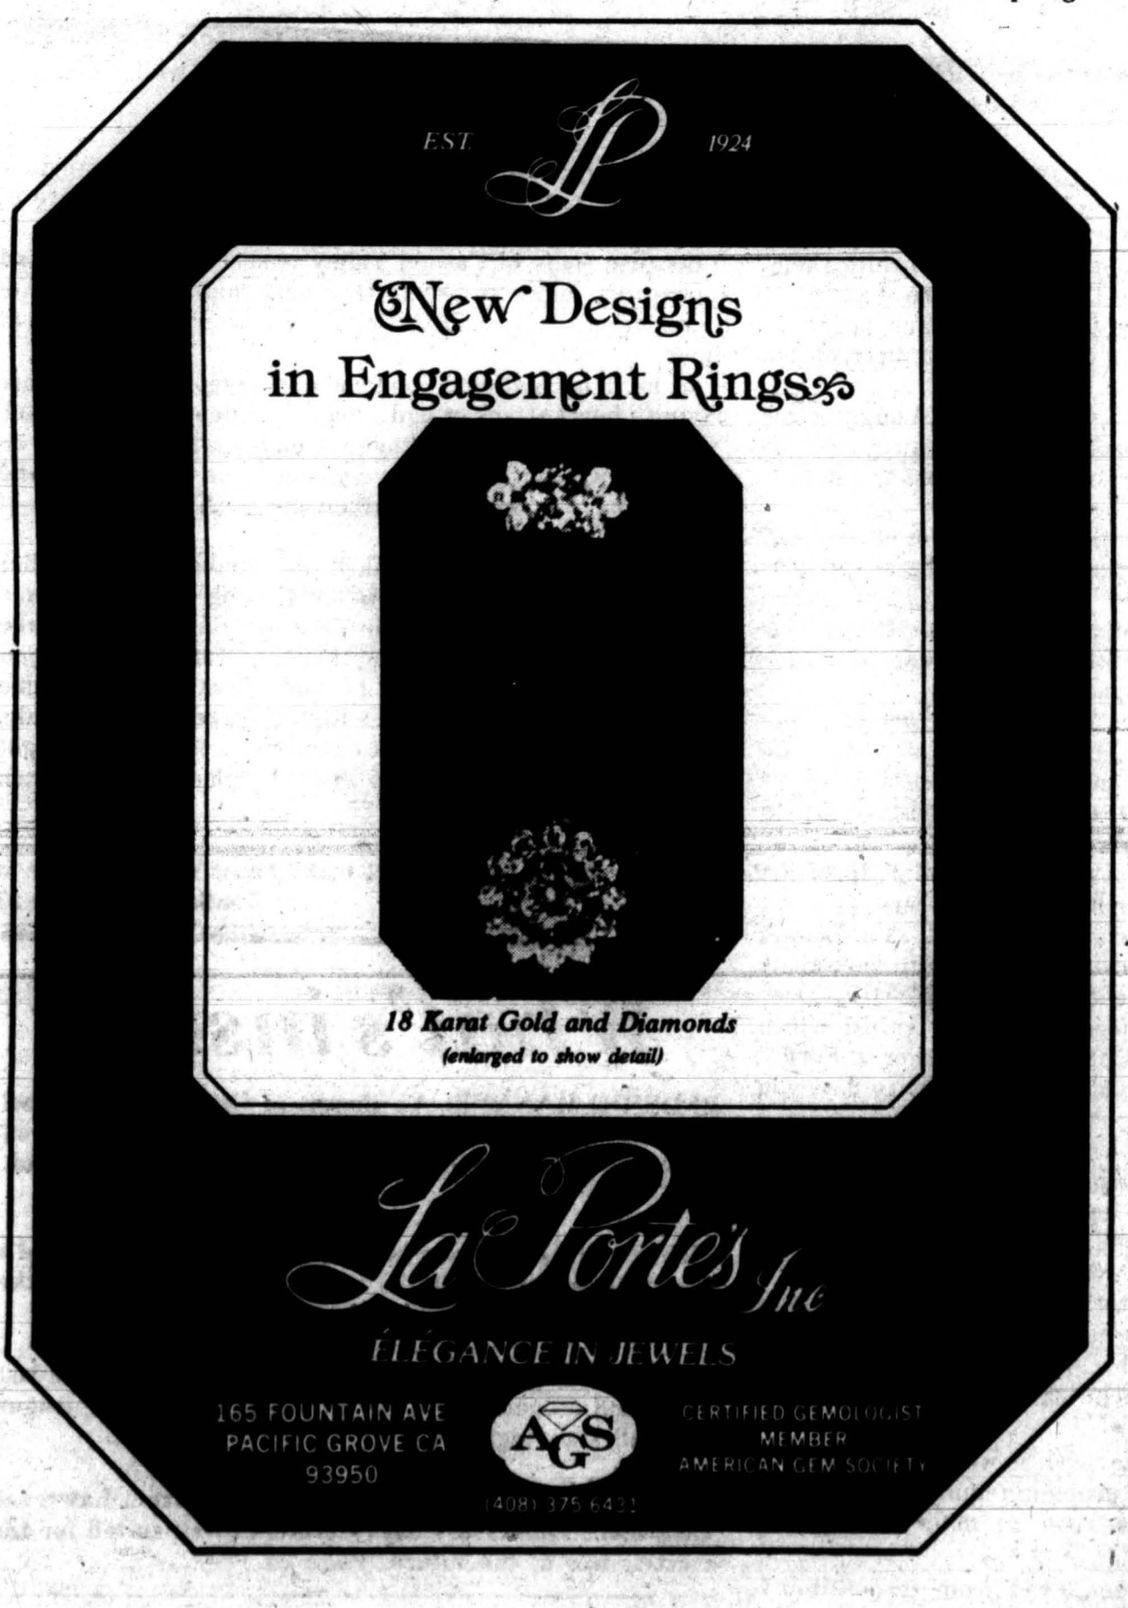

Dominique Adoja, an eight-year-old Carmel girl stricken by cerebral palsy, will lead the sixth annual March of Dimes Walkathon on the Monterey Peninsula. The fund-raising event is scheduled Saturday, May 13 in Monterey.

Registration will take place between 7:30 and 8:30 a.m. at Monterey High School on Hermann Drive, where the walk will begin and end. The purpose is to raise funds to support the ongoing March of Dimes fight to protect the unborn and the newborn from birth defects. Walkers can be of any age. They need at least one sponsor who agrees to pay at least 10 cents for every kilometer they complete. Nancy Snow, publicist for the event, advised the walkers to wear comfortable shoes, bring a jacket and pack a bag lunch.

There will be checkpoints along the way for water, snacks, bathrooms and first aid. In the afternoon, the Wylie Band will perform at the cafeteria from 3 to 5 p.m., and Smokey the Bear will be there dancing.

Prizes are offered for the most money turned in by the deadline, which is 4 p.m. on May 25. Sponsor sheets are available at local schools, Monterey Savings and Loan offices and the March of Dimes office, at 883 Abrego St., Monterey. Adults and children are all welcome.

Last year, 523 persons joined the walkathon and a total of $23,439 was pledged.

Carmel nurse accepts job in an Asian leper colony

TRACEY WHITE wanted to do something more than go straight from nursing school to a well-paid job as a registered nurse. So, on Tuesday, she flew to Bangkok, Thailand, to begin a year of work at a leper colony in that Southeast Asian country.

"It seemed like a fairly different experience I wanted to try," said Tracey, 23, a Carmel High School graduate.

"There's so much money with intensive care and coronary care, it's really tantalizing to nurses to go off in that direction. As soon as you graduate, there is a lot of peer pressure to get out and get a job right away.

"Most people don't take the time to find out what they really want to do."

She first heard about the McKean Rehabilitation Institute in Chiang Mai through a group called Option Nursing in San Diego. Tracey likens the organization to the Peace Corps, offering nurses a chance to get practical experience while performing a social service at the same time.

"But you can pick where you go, how long you'll stay, negotiate what your salary will be," she said.

Tracey has chosen an initial time period of a year. She could leave sooner if there are problems—or stay longer if she finds it rewarding. She has corresponded with one woman from Florida who went there intending to stay a year. She was at the colony for four years.

Financialy rewards are minimal. She will earn $50 a month and get room and board at the 160-acre island which comprises the colony in northwestern Thailand.

But, she notes, "I've been trying to turn down my lifestyle. When you start earning a large salary, it's easy to spend a lot of money on extraneous things."

HER WORK with the patients at the leper colony will cover a variety of areas, although she is unclear what her specific duties will be.

"I'm hoping it will be primary care with the patients and not just dispensing medicine," Tracey said.

There are about 100 patients at the center receiving anything from reconstruction surgery to occupational therapy.

While leprosy has by and large been eradicated in the western world, it is still a major health problem in Asia and India, she said. It is generally not contagious, but is mostly feared because of its debilitating effects on victims. Tracey visited a doctor in the San Francisco area who is an authority on the disease before accepting the job. She said she wanted "to talk out a few of my own questions."

The physician gave her some medication to take as a vaccine against the contagious variety, although Tracey says that none of the employees at the Thailand center use medication.

She said this doctor treats 600 cases of leprosy in northern California.

WHETHER SHE STAYS a year or more, or just a few months, depends upon her experience there. Tracey hopes to travel in Asia and India while she is overseas.

She will get instruction in the Thai language from the center. And, to ease her transition to Asia, a Royal Thai Navy officer who studied at the Defense Language Institute has invited her to stay with his family in Bangkok before she heads north to the colony.

Her own family was worried at first about the move because Tracey had no details about the center or her work there.

Now they are "fully supportive" she said. Her parents, William and Helen White, just recently moved from Carmel to Reno, Nev.

Her three years as a student at St. Luke's Hospital in San Francisco prepared her as a nurse. Now Tracey hopes an experience in Thailand will "change my perception of things" as she moves beyond school and into the rest of her life.

Trio from Carmel gets special honor

Three Carmel women received Special Community Service Awards last week when Volunteers in Action honored 34 Monterey Peninsula residents at a recognition ceremony.

Only four special awards were given. They went to Dorothy von Meier, Barbara Rainer and Ruth Fenton, all from Carmel, and Emile Serres of Salinas.

Eleven other Carmel and Carmel Valley residents received certificates of appreciation during ceremonies at the First Presbyterian Church of Monterey.

Honored were Gail Buche of Carmel Valley, nominated by the Carmel Unified School District for her outstanding community service; and, from Carmel, Thelma Stohr, Alliance on Aging; Paula Rogers, Cancer Recovery Project; Mary Morain, Carmel Convalescent Hospital; Brig. Gen. (Ret.) Arthur T. Mason, USMC, Carmel Foundation; Jean Moritz, Child Abuse Prevention Council; Helen Lambert, Family Service Agency; John and Joanna Adoja, March of Dimes; Anne Odette Call, Sunshiners, Eskaton Hospital; and the late Marie Elizabeth Craig, a posthumous award, Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Services.

Mrs. von Meier has been a volunteer for 17 years with the Carmel chapter of the American Red Cross and worked for other volunteer groups. She has used her artistic talents in Red Cross public information and training efforts. Mrs. von Meier has served as a registered nurse with the Bloodmobile and ridden on ambulances when she was needed.

Her other services include terms on the Carmel Unified School District board of trustees, the Carmel Planning Commission, the Girl Scout Council, Choral Society and the Carmel Recreation Commission. She also has served as treasurer for the American Federation for the Arts on the Peninsula.

Mrs. Fenton has been president of the Lyceum, a group devoted to providing programs for gifted students. She started the Prime 30 project aimed at helping bright students' poor families. She has served on the board of directors of the Junior League, a women's service organization, founded the York Shop Store for York School, was on the citizens' committees for the Carmel and Monterey Peninsula Unified School Districts and is a vice president of the Visitor and Convention Bureau for the Monterey Chamber of Commerce.

She also serves on the board of directors for Beacon House, an alcoholic recovery center, and is vice president of the Alcoholism Council on the Peninsula. She also serves on the national President's Commission on Scholars, the State Committee for Gifted Children, is chairman of the California Association for the Gifted and was a judge with former Gov. Edmund G. "Pat" Brown for the western U.S. selections for Truman Scholarships. Mrs. Fenton also is a volunteer with the American Cancer Society.

Mrs. Rainer has been a volunteer with the Children's Home Society for 25 years. She helped form the Little Bits Auxiliary, one of four Peninsula auxiliaries for the group. As president of the auxiliary, she organized a fundraising drive that brought in more than $4,000. She also has served on the society district board and helped draft a report on the need for child care after school hours.

Bedal joined in manuevers

Marine Lance Corporal David W. Bedal, son of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Bedal of 8020 Fair Oaks Blvd., Carmel, recently participated in exercise "Palm Tree 5-78" in the California desert.

He is based at Camp Pendleton.

The exercise tested the capability of a battalion landing team to deploy by strategic airlift and to provide live-fire training.

Bedal joined the U.S. Marine Corps in January 1976.

CARMEL DESERTED
WHILE FISHERMEN GET THE LIMIT

Tuesday, Carmel was as quiet as a South Carolina Sunday while the Carmel River, for 20 or 30 miles along its banks, looked like an Iowa picnic on Los Angeles Boulevard.

Tuesday, May 1, was the official opening of the trout season, and a holiday besides. May Day, the occasion for riots, saw a riot among Carmel households to get lunch kits filled and fishing tackle in shape in order to be the first to get up to the river.

BIRDMEN SWIM IN CARMEL BAY

A giant winged bird landed on the Carmel Beach last week.

The bird was actually a plane—full of aviators from a San Francisco-based aviation magazine. They were headed for Santa Barbara on a publicity campaign.

But as they flew over the beach here, something told them that the thing they wanted most was a swim in the cool, green water below. So they landed beside a sandcastle and took an afternoon dip.

CAMPAIGN TO GROUND UTILITY POLES BEGINS

A campaign has been launched to place the light and telephone wires underground in the Carmel business district.

A letter requesting the undergrounding was recently sent to the Joint Pole Association of Oakland, the organization that has control of the overhead wires for all power-carrying corporations in California.

There will be action backing up this initial step by various civic organizations, and undoubtedly the Carmel Planning Commission and the City Council.

COUNCIL FINDS PAVING EXPENSIVE

The City Council made a shocking discovery Wednesday evening. Paving a 100-foot wide street costs twice as much as they expected.

Planned improvements of Junipero between Fifth and Eighth Streets will cost $36,000, but the city has earmarked only $14,000 for the project.

"It will take four years to do those three blocks if we wait for the money to accumulate," pointed out Street Commissioner Francis Whitaker.

ONE WAY TO STAY OUT OF JAIL—GO SEE ONE

A group of Carmel High School students have figured out the best way to stay out of jail is to go visit one.

So students from two U.S. history classes went on a field trip to the Monterey County Courthouse in Salinas.

The students all decided it would be their last visit.

SHOULD HIGHWAY SIGNS
ADVERTISE SUNSET CENTER?

Councilman Herbert Blanks has asked for the removal of the green and white highway signs advertising free parking at Sunset Center.

At last week's City Council meeting, Blanks said the signs were approved by the City Council, "when there was a political struggle regarding the use of Sunset Center." He said the City Council originally put them there temporarily.

Two weeks ago, the planning commission indicated its desire to have the signs removed. The question was turned over to the Lands and Improvements Committee.

LEASH LAW TAKEN FOR A WALK

Last month's proposed City Council ordinance calling for a leash law on the Carmel Beach, died for lack of a second at last week's City Council meeting.

But not wanting to see it gone forever, the City Council referred the question back to the committee on Public Welfare, the originators of the ordinance.

"During budget time we should consider a dog catcher," commented Councilman William Sefton.

'It sounded simple'

"IT SOUNDED SO simple. We wanted to move a cute little house in Carmel to a cute little lot in the Valley," said Shirley Mitchell. "I don't think I'll ever do it again." She bought the house (and only the house), situated at 26317 Camino Real, from Janenne Bath of Sunset Corner Realty in August 1977. After cutting through red tape connected with the move and waiting out one of the rainiest winters on record, her contractor, Al Henningsen of Salinas, sawed the house into thirds and started the move. The final piece went to the Valley earlier this week (above). Two weeks ago, when the odyssey began, Shirley looked down upon the rubble (below), drew a deep breath and smiled. Henningsen is in the background. (Michael Stang photos)

Hollister shares first after beating Padres, 7-4

By JAY POSNER

Losing to Hollister High 7-4 on Friday, the Carmel High Padres fell back into a tie with the Hay Balers for first place in the Mission Trail Athletic League. The Padres' game against King City last week was rained out and will be made up at a later date.

The Padres scored all four of their runs in the fourth inning on a three-run homer by designated hitter Dave Carpenter and a solo blast by Mike Odello.

Those runs appeared to be enough for the Padres as Carmel pitcher John Lucido was breezing along on a six-hit shutout through five innings. However, Lucido lost his control and walked the first three batters of the sixth before he was replaced by John Frincke. But Frincke didn't do much better as he walked the next two batters to give Hollister two runs. Frincke then balked in another run before he finally recorded an out. Another ground ball out resulted in the fourth run and a tie game. An intentional walk put runners on first and second and Alfonso Martinez followed with a home run to give Hollister a 7-4 win.

Larry Gonzales picked up the win for the Hay Balers while John Frincke, now 0-1, took the loss. The Padres hosted Palma on Tuesday and they travel to Pacific Grove tomorrow. Game time is 3:30 p.m.

In junior varsity action, the Padres edged Hollister 3-2 in a game played Friday at Carmel. Mike Wecker had two doubles and was also the winning pitcher. The win keeps Carmel in first place with a 6-1 record in MTAL action.

Proposal rapped

Vista Nadura dealt setback by county planners

A PROPOSED 420-unit development on the Anita Doud Ranch in Carmel Valley ran into a wall of opposition at the Monterey County Planning Commission last week and faces anything from long delays to outright rejection.

The project, called Vista Nadura by developer Nader Agha of Pebble Beach, will receive a land use hearing before the commission on May 31. The hearing will determine if development of the 1,296-acre parcel is consistent with area land use planning.

Commissioners indicated they would find it inconsistent when they denied Agha's request to proceed with an environmental impact report at their April 26 meeting.

The property is on the north slope of Carmel Valley Road and is situated between Carmel Valley Manor and Berwick Canyon, abutting Tierra Grande and Hidden Hills on the east. It is owned by Eugene Prescott of Arizona.

Questions about the development raised by Commissioner William Peters ranged from uncertainties about water supply and sewage disposal to the potential link-up between Vista Nadura and Monterey II, the proposed major development of the hill region on the south side of Highway 68.

Peters cited independent information, reported to be from Agha himself, that Agha has an option to purchase the Work Ranch at the top of the ridge between Carmel Valley and the Highway 68 side of the ridge.

Asked by Peters at the hearing if he has any interest in acquiring adjacent property, Agha declined comment.

The development proposal for Vista Nadura calls for 220 condominiums on 55 acres and 200 single-family homesites on the remaining property. The homesites would range in size from 2.5 to 12 acres, averaging 5.5 acres, according to Carl Hooper of Bestor Engineers Inc.

Water, Hooper told the commission, would come either from California-American Water Co. if a meter connection ban is lifted by the Public Utilities Commission or from an on-site well system.

Peters said there is no proven source of water at this point, so approval of a preliminary map would be premature.

The development also calls for a master septic tank system to treat sewage from the condominium development. There would be independent septic tanks for the homesites.

But Peters pointed out in an interview Friday that another major subdivision engineered by Hooper—Villas Carmel del Pacifico—was rejected because the site was unsuitable for septic tanks. The land is adjacent to the Vista Nadura property.

Hooper said Monday that there is a "drastic difference" between the two developments. Villas Carmel was planned for one-acre lots, not the larger parcels envisioned for Vista Nadura, he said.

ANOTHER QUESTION which Peters said is unanswered is a specific plan for the condominium development. Agha told the commission he wants to sell the single-family lots off first and doesn't plan to build the condominiums for some time. He said a specific plan for the condominiums would be submitted later.

Peters commented Friday that "we don't approve anyone else on that basis."

The impending completion of the Carmel Valley Master Plan also could affect the proposal, he said. Vista Nadura should be reviewed after the Master Plan is finished, he said. It should be finished by fall.

"There are massive environmental impacts associated with this project," Peters said Friday. "This project represents massive cumulative growth for the Valley."

He said the county is in the process of preparing an overall growth management policy which would call for "infilling" of already developed areas before growth expands into new territory, Peters said. "Infilling" is a planner's term for allowing construction only in gaps between existing subdivisions.

He is serving on the committee drafting the policy, along with Supervisors Michal Moore and Edwin Norris. Peters said Norris is "receptive" to the concept of infilling.

"Vista Nadura is not in any defined area," he said Friday. "It is not at the mouth of the Valley, not at Mid-Valley and not at the Village. If we follow a policy of infilling, development would occur in those areas first."

Peters said if the commission finds the project premature, the developer could appeal to the board of supervisors. The board could, in turn, refer the matter back to the commission and order an environmental impact report.

"They aren't bound by any policy," he said. "Any number of scenarios could occur."

HOOPER WAS critical Monday of the commission action, saying the commissioners "got astray on a lot of things that don't have anything to do with this project."

He said the presentation was not designed to be a detailed proposal.

"We were just trying to get through the first step to prepare an EIR," he said.

Despite the negative reactions, Hooper commented that, "I don't consider this a closed door."

Medical generalists find following the medical profession today. They will have the patient meet them at their emergency room or Community Hospital if they think the case warrants it.

The two doctors live in Carmel Valley which makes things a little easier on themselves and their families. They generally do not have far to travel to get to the home of a patient.

Viken estimated they only go out on call four or five times a week. He said while they are limited in what medicine and examining equipment they can carry in their black bag, house calls have a psychological value to the patient.

"The patient feels better if he can stay in his own bed and I can come in to look at him," he said. "They have more of a social value than a medical value. They feel better just by my coming to their bedside and laying my hands on them."

TOCCHET HAD ONE experience when he first opened the practice which would have driven many a physician away from house calls for good.

It was Christmas Eve. He got a call from the friends of an old rancher in the Valley, a man who just recently died in his 90s.

"I showed up and the old man was telling his friends to tell me to go away. I walked into the bedroom and he was bundled up under a quilt. He said, 'I told you to get the hell out!' and pulled a shotgun out from under the covers and leveled it at me.

"Well, I finally talked him into letting me examine him. I told him he had nothing to worry about as long as he had the gun.

"He had an intestinal blockage and needed surgery. He must have been in a lot of pain and he was going to be dead in a short while if he didn't have surgery.

"I gave him a shot for the pain and we reached an agreement on my fee, which he felt was reasonable. He gave me the gun then. His friends said I didn't have anything to worry about because the gun wasn't loaded, but when I opened it it had two shells and the gun was all cocked and ready to fire."

The next day the rancher was carried off to the hospital on a makeshift stretcher made by taking a door off its hinges. He carried his shotgun with him under the quilt until they were ready to take him inside the hospital. Even then it took 10 minutes of discussion to get him to give it up, Tocchet said.

"These ranchers come in on death's door," he said. "They take care of themselves until they can't stand it."

Equestrians' broken bones are almost routine, he said. But exotic problems like tetanus crop up more frequently than in a city. He has even had to treat a scorpion bite. The patient unwittingly brought the scorpion back with her in her luggage from Mexico.

Although he probably could have made more money as an orthopedist, Tocchet is completely satisfied with his chosen medical practice.

"It's a lot more fun," he said. "It's extremely rewarding to me. I've seen thousands of kids, some of them from day one—kids who were young and are now in middle school or college.

"It's everything I thought it would be and more."

Recharge problem minimal

Electric buses would work in Carmel, engineer says

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

CARMEL IS regarded as a prime candidate for electric-powered buses by an engineer from Lawrence Livermore Laboratory who is studying them.

Because it is relatively small, Carmel probably could use the buses all day without stopping to recharge their batteries, said Lawrence O'Connell. O'Connell, interviewed recently during a visit here, works in the transportation systems division at Lawrence Livermore. His study of alternative transit modes is being underwritten by a grant from the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE).

LAWRENCE G. O'Connell, an engineer at the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory, says by late 1979 Carmel could be experimenting with electric buses. According to O'Connell, the city is well suited for electric-powered vehicles.

Carmel is one of 35 cities nationwide that has expressed interest in the program.

In March the Carmel City Council voted unanimously to request updated electric bus information from the DOE. No other commitments were made, however.

City Administrator Jack Collins supports an intra-city transit system in Carmel. He was the one who asked the City Council to consider this proposal.

The City Council rejected a proposal in February 1977 for a local minibus service in conjunction with Monterey Peninsula Transit. Councilmen objected to the long-term financial commitment.

The federal government has earmarked $25 million for the 20-year alternative transportation program, according to O'Connell. Some funds are derived from the Electric and Hybrid Vehicle Research and Demonstration Act, passed by Congress in September 1976.

What does the government want out of it? A decreasing dependency on foreign oil. Last year, the United States spent $45 billion for foreign oil, O'Connell said.

CARMEL HAS never had a public transportation system operating only in the city limits. O'Connell said the electric bus system would be non-polluting, and partially underwritten by the government.

By January, the DOE probably will contact Carmel city officials to see if the city is interested in the project, O'Connell said.

There are presently fewer than 10,000 electric vehicles on the road in the United States, O'Connell said. Within the next five years, the DOE hopes it can help double that number.

The government, however, is not manufacturing the vehicles. Rather, it is encouraging private industry to manufacture them through special grants, and by sharing information gathered at laboratories, such as the one in Livermore.

Manufacturers in the program must certify that the vehicles meet specific government standards. The vehicles will be tested by the DOE.

By October 1979, the government hopes to subsidize 200 public transportation electric vehicles. "Within the next year or two, if Carmel wants it, there could very possibly be electric buses running here," O'Connell said.

CARMEL HAS a slight edge over many other cities because of its size.

"Smallness is a real advantage," O'Connell said. Most electric vehicles now require recharging every 50 miles. The recharging process can take up to eight hours.

"Because of Carmel's small size, buses could run virtually all day without being recharged," he said.

"That is the problem with electric vehicles. They don't go very far," O'Connell said. Carmel's hills would not hinder the buses, according to O'Connell. "The hills require more energy, but that energy can be recovered when the buses go downhill," he said.

The batteries are similar to those used in golf carts. They weigh about 65 pounds. Small buses that seat 10 passengers could require 20 of these batteries to operate efficiently.

Electric vehicles are available, but most performance levels are low, according to O'Connell. They do not go very fast or very far, he said. Prices range from $2,500 to $10,000.

Large American automobile manufacturers are finally becoming interested in electric vehicles. General Motors recently announced it will develop an electric car, O'Connell said. General Electric also is developing an electric vehicle.

Woods school principal to Saudi Arabia

Carmel Woods School principal Raymon A. Wilson has been granted a two-year leave of absence by the Carmel Unified School District board of trustees to work and study in Saudi Arabia.

Wilson, a teacher and principal with the district for eight years, will work as a school administrator for the English language school operated by Aramco, the Arab-American Oil Company. Wilson said the school is run for the children of company employees.

Wilson and his family will live in Rastanara, a Persian Gulf city. He said he also will have a chance to study at European universities and travel "extensively" during his two years overseas.

He will not be paid by the Carmel district during his absence, and must notify the district by the spring of 1981 if he intends to return at the end of his leave.

Basic skills exam ratified by trustees

CARMEL Unified School District trustees adopted a state-mandated policy last week to test and tutor students in basic skills necessary to get a high school diploma after June 1980.

But the board made it clear they reserve the option of changing the standards later if it appears that too many students will not meet the requirements.

The present freshman class will be given the basic skills tests in reading, writing and mathematics within the next month. They will be required under the policy to pass each of the three tests with an 80 per cent mark at some point if they want to graduate.

Under the policy, the students will be tested in the eighth, 10th and 11th grades. Those who fail the test at any point must come in for special consultation with a teacher, their parents and a counselor. Remedial programs will be set up under the policy to give intensive instruction in basic skills to students.

STUDENTS will still be required to pass 230 units of various high school courses in order to get a diploma. The basic skills test is added as another requirement, imposed under AB 65, the State Education Reform Bill enacted in 1977.

Trustees agonized over the specific passing levels required in the tests before adopting the policy unanimously.

Trustee Frances Gaver said the "responsibility is weighing pretty heavily on my shoulders. I don't know if I have enough information to make that judgement."

She commented that there is no standard for gauging the reliability of the tests and that some students who are good in other subjects might never be able to do a mathematics problem.

"What do we do to them?" she asked. "Say you cannot have a diploma from Carmel High School?

"Very serious consideration should be given to what we define to be minimum," she said.

SUPT. HARRIS Taylor pointed out that the trustees can "raise or lower the difficulty level as you see fit," and that the test can easily be revised before the 1981 class graduates.

Assistant Superintendent Bob Whitehead predicted that 10 to 15 per cent of the students who take the tests will not pass the first time.

"If we identify them and give them help, by the 12th grade I expect all of them will graduate and we will have really done our job—tutored them in the basics," Whitehead said. "If these assumptions don't bear out, then we've set our standard too high and have to make an adjustment." He also said that similar evaluation tests will be required of lower grade students in coming years, helping identify learning problems that much sooner.

Taylor emphasized that the whole testing procedure is so new that "no one has enough experience to make a commitment you have to live with forever."

River Inn lawyer will seek a delay

A continuance will be asked on a land use hearing about expansion at the Carmel River Inn when the issue comes before the Monterey County Planning Commission on Wednesday.

Landowner and developer Myron Etienne Jr. said his law practice will take him out of town on that date. He wants to add 45 units. Etienne said he will ask for a postponement until May 31.

The River Inn motel expansion at Highway 1 just north of the Carmel River had been scheduled for a hearing on the same date as a 71-unit expansion project proposed at the Los Laureles Lodge in Carmel Valley.

The planning commission is scheduled to review both developments and determine if the proposed uses are consistent with land use planned for the areas.

Los Laureles Lodge owners are appealing the issue to the county board of supervisors on May 9, claiming the expansion is consistent with area development plans and that they should be permitted to prepare an environmental impact report for the project.

Etienne said he did not contest the planning commission ruling, adding that, "I think (the planning department) staff made a mistake" in recommending a land use hearing.

"I don't object to a land use hearing," he added.

There is some disagreement about whether the 9.58-acre motel site off Oliver Road is planned for park use. The land is in the 100-year floodplain. The site was planned for residential development by an earlier owner.

Viscount Ferguson

BARCLAY FERGUSON, the artist from Carmel, properly should be called "the Right Honorable Viscount Ferguson of Lamond" after being named a member of the Jacobite Peerage by Prince James Edward Stuart. The title became effective Tuesday. Barclay, 53, is a native-born Scot. Prince James is scheduled to personally acknowledge the appointment on May 21, when he will serve as best man at Barclay's wedding. He will wed Harriet Lerner Allen of Carmel. (Steve Crouch photo)

Farrell's touch

By the Rev. LARRY FARRELL

O Lord give us the wisdom and prudence to be kind and thoughtful to my neighbors of all ages. May we remember we cannot fulfill our obligation of charity with money alone. Money will buy a pedigreed dog, but it won't buy the wag of his tail.

The 20th century man has little or no respect for age unless it's bottled in bond. On the one hand, he collects antiques and on the other he discards his antique citizens.

A recent report said that young women preferred old men to young ones. But, alas, their definition of an old man is one in his 30s.

(Editor's note: Father Farrell delivered this invocation April 26 to the Carmel Rotary Club.)

Planners overruled on Valley subdivision

THE MONTEREY County Board of Supervisors overruled the planning commission and voted last week to allow a minor subdivision in Carmel Valley with 15 potential lots rather than the 11-lot subdivision endorsed by the planners.

The 21.9-acre parcel is situated between Meadows and Cypress Roads, on the south side of Carmel Valley Road. Portions of the land are owned by four individuals: Don Middleton, Ken Van Hagen and Jack George of Porter-Marquard Realty and William Pearce, who sold 14 acres to the three men and retained 7.9 acres for himself.

The parcels owned by Middleton, Van Hagen and George are being considered for development at this time, but the entire parcel had to be considered as a minor subdivision under county law because of its present zoning.

The four men proposed dividing the land into 15 parcels ranging from 1.1 acres up to two acres in size. Current zoning permits one unit per acre or a theoretical maximum of 21 units.

The planning commission proposed only 11 lots for the site.

SUPERVISOR Sam Farr said the issue should be "good land use rather than how many lots. No one is really concerned with whether you have one or nine or 11 lots, but in how you use the land as far as trees, water and open space."

Both Farr and later Middleton pointed out that the minor subdivision complies with all county law.

"We're not trying to circumvent any ordinance," Middleton told the board.

He said the parcel is surrounded by 29 homes and homesites and explained the project would be an example of "infilling" in a developed area. The property was farmed until 1976, he said, when taxes reached "three and a half times the agricultural income" and Pearce made his first subdivision plans.

Patricia Bernardi, who lives adjacent to the south side of the property, spoke on behalf of neighbors in the area whose complaints to the planning commission had led to the reduction in the number of lots.

She expressed concern about the location of a well for the property's mutual water system, noting that it would be downhill from septic tanks on the property. She added that the land has sandy soil and the 15 septic systems could pollute the well.

Middleton countered that the well site had been approved by the county health department.

Mrs. Bernardi also noted that when the land was first brought in for subdivision in 1976, there was no neighbor objection to 2.5-acre lots on the property. She said most of the neighboring lots are 1.5 acres or larger and that neighbors are worried about a higher density.

Middleton presented figures to show that of the 29 neighboring lots, seven are one acre or less; nine are one to 1.5 acres; nine are 1.5 to 2.5 acres and four are 2.5 acres or larger.

Mrs. Bernardi also questioned whether the area could handle much additional traffic.

SUPERVISOR Michal Moore said that "15 units is by no means a minor subdivision" and that the project should be given major subdivision treatment.

But with developer compliance with the law and the present zoning of the property, Farr said, "I don't think the board can arbitrarily decide a parcel should have a larger lot size."

He made a motion that the appeal for 15 lots be upheld and the matter referred to the county minor subdivision committee to have conditions placed on the development "maximizing the number of lots and minimizing the adverse environmental effects."

Van Hagen told the Pine Cone later in the day that the three partners in the development "have to live here" and "don't want our names associated with something shacky."

He said they are uncertain if they will build homes there themselves or sell the lots for individual development, adding that the trio would "probably bend over backward" to put conditions on construction to ensure that the development is an agreeable one to its neighbors.

JESS N. TAYLOR, the student body president at Carmel High School, has won a $500 cash award from Pacific Gas and Electric Co. He was one of 34 runners-up in the firm's college scholarship judging. In college, Jess plans to study law, journalism and political science. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Taylor of Carmel.

Registration underway for kindergarten

Parents residing in the Carmel Unified School District can register their children for fall kindergarten classes through Thursday, May 12. Registration can be completed at each of the five elementary schools between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. on weekdays.

A child must be four years and nine months of age on or before September 1, 1978 in order to be eligible for kindergarten entrance.

Birth certificates and documentary proof of immunization records will be required at the time of registration. Although a child may be registered any time from now until the opening of school next fall, parents are encouraged to register their children during the next two weeks.

FREE WANT ADS

For subscribers to the Carmel Pine Cone

A SPECIAL GET-ACQUAINTED OFFER TO OUR VALUED SUBSCRIBERS

The Pine Cone is now under new ownership and new management. We are happy to be here and look forward to meeting our subscribers. Meanwhile, as a gesture of our thanks for your continued support, we invite you to have a free want ad, every week, in your paper.

HOW TO WRITE A WANT AD

List the classification you want your ad to appear under in the form at right. Then start your ad with the item you have for sale, etc. Be sure to include your phone number at the end. To make your ad effective, describe your item fully including such things as weight, size, color, age, condition, etc. It is best to list your asking price; this will eliminate calls from people who are not prospective buyers.

RULES:

Free want ads are for person-to-person sales only. Ads for businesses or real estate will not be accepted. Free ads must be written on this form only and delivered to our office by noon Tuesday (no phone ads, please). Free ads are limited to 20 words. The Pine Cone is not responsible for errors in free ads. Limit is one ad per subscriber per week. To run the same ad the following week, a new ad on a new form must be submitted. Publisher reserves the right to refuse to accept any free ad for any reason. Free ads may be placed in the following classifications: Antiques, Autos for Sale, Boats for Sale, Lost & Found, Misc. for Sale, Pets & Livestock, Special Notices, Wanted, Yard Sales.

This label is your ticket for a free ad and must appear here on any ad you turn in. Clip this label from the front page of your weekly Pine Cone.

Sheriff candidate

Ed Sutton, 51, up through the police ranks

ED SUTTON of the Monterey Police Department sat down and stretched out his legs with a smile of relief. He had been out pounding the pavement for a week, not on a patrol beat but as a candidate for Monterey County sheriff.

Sutton, 51, has risen far

First in a series

from the rank of patrolman since he joined the force in 1953 after a career in the military. He has been assistant police chief for Monterey since 1969.

A Carmel Valley resident, Sutton believes he can bring more responsive law enforcement to the unincorporated areas of the county on the Monterey Peninsula and down the coast of Big Sur. It is his main campaign theme.

"The control of Salinas (over the department) is too acute," Sutton said. "We've got to have more local control.

"On the Monterey Peninsula, for example, the persons in charge of the substation should be permanently assigned to the job instead of rotated out in three or four years. He should know the community and take a leadership role with the police departments here.

"We should have our own investigators and, if the (substation) captain feels it is necessary, our own juvenile officer."

Sutton also said he wants more autonomy for substation commanders on the Peninsula and the coast, in North County and in South County. He said he wants resident deputies in the Carmel Valley, Big Sur and other areas far from central substation offices and an independent captain directing the substation.

"Most people know who the sheriff is," Sutton said, "but they don't know who Harvey Nyland is." Nyland is the Monterey Peninsula substation captain.

He claims the department lacks Peninsula representation

SUTTON CAME back again and again to the point that the Salinas Valley is "a whole different world" from Carmel, Carmel Valley and the other Peninsula communities.

"We're a different kind of area," he said. "We are very tourist oriented, very festival oriented, musically oriented. There's no representation for the Peninsula (in the sheriff's department). I think that's bad."

Sutton said if the candidate leading the field, Assistant Sheriff David "Bud" Cook, had shown any inclination to change and grant some extra attention to the Peninsula, "I might not have run. It doesn't seem to me he's offering any changes."

Sutton said if Cook or California Highway Patrolman Bill Avey are elected, "all the upper staff in the department will be from Salinas."

ANOTHER FOCUS in Sutton's campaign is training deputies more thoroughly in such areas as family crisis intervention, driver training and officer survival.

"I would spend more money on training for deputies, rather than senior staff," Sutton said.

During his 25 years with the Monterey department, he has worked in all phases of police operations, from administration to investigations to the jail and patrol divisions. He also teaches police science courses at Monterey Peninsula College.

He has a bachelor's degree from Golden Gate University and has attended MPC and the FBI National Academy.

He graduated from the Fort Gordon Military Police School while with the California National Guard. He was a lieutenant colonel in the guard following a tour of duty with the infantry during World War II. Sutton left the guard when he was promoted to assistant chief in Monterey.

Among other professional and civic organizations, Sutton is president-elect of the Monterey Kiwanis Club, a member of the American Legion in Monterey, a board member on the Carmel High School Boosters Club and twice president of the Monterey Police Relief Association.

He lives with his wife, Anneliese, on Berwick Drive in the Valley. They have a daughter, Patricia, who works at the Mid-Valley branch of Monterey Savings, and a son, Gene, a graduating senior at Carmel High School who starred as a wide receiver on the football team.

On other issues, Sutton said:

- He believes the marijuana issue will be "resolved over time," but says making minor possession a citation instead of a felony has made life "easier for police."
- Lowering the drinking age to 19 (a proposal in the state legislature) "seems to work in other states," but he was uncertain if it would succeed in California.
- He would put a major emphasis on burglary investigation on the Peninsula, which he linked to hard drug use. Sutton said he would "improve the organization" of anti-burglary efforts by the sheriff's department, noting that beat deputies and resident deputies could be more aware of crime before it happens and perhaps reduce burglaries that way.
- He wants to see extra security precautions taken at the county jail, which he called a "plastic jail." He said economies in its construction are costing money now which could be better spent in stopping crime.

(Editor's note: This is the first in a series of interviews with candidates for Monterey County sheriff. Also running are Assistant Sheriff David "Bud" Cook, California Highway Patrolman Bill Avey and public protection consultant Reginald W. Dewar.)

Septic tank precautions mulled by Valley advisors

SEWAGE DISPOSAL needs in Carmel Valley should be studied by the Carmel Sanitary District and county public health authorities, according to a recommendation adopted by the Carmel Valley Master Plan Committee on Thursday of last week.

The suggestion was part of a comprehensive report and series of recommendations adopted by the committee as it works on a revised Master Plan for the Valley.

The subcommittee also got more information on the dim prospects for low-cost housing or housing assistance in the Valley from representatives of the Monterey County Housing Authority and the Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments (AMBAG).

The wastewater recommendations adopted by the committee are based on continued use of septic tanks as the primary sewage disposal method for the Valley.

But the report on the subject notes that only a continued low population growth rate can make septic tanks feasible in the Valley where there are steep slopes and unfavorable soil conditions.

"Increased density at some point may cause septic failure to the extent that costly collection systems and centralized treatment will become necessary, with the financial burden of such systems acting to promote still greater density," the report concludes.

The report calls for decisions to be made on population density so that sewage disposal can be planned to fit the Valley. It leaves open the possibility that package sewage treatment plants could be developed in the future, reducing the need for a centralized sewage system, while noting, "these advances cannot be assumed." It asks the sanitary district, Supervisor Sam Farr and the county health department to study the "future liquid waste management needs of Carmel Valley to determine what actions need to be taken to provide economical and efficient service."

GIVEN THAT septic tanks are envisioned as the primary means of sewage disposal, the report suggests ways to improve tank functioning. These include having a one-acre minimum for single-family homes with septic tanks; providing for continued public education in how the tanks work and what maintenance is needed; encouraging water conservation by tank users; urging county health officials to become more familiar with soil analysis so they better know where septic tanks can be situated safely; and periodically updating standards for septic tank design, installation and maintenance to reflect new research.

Many ignorant about their operation

The report also proposes that the location of the tanks be permanently marked and an inspection hole be installed on all new tanks and when all existing tanks are serviced.

Committee member Bill Cranston said many homeowners have no idea where their septic tanks are located, how they work or how often they need to be pumped.

While the committee wants minimum one-acre lots for home septic tanks, it voted to recommend that greater density be permitted for clustered dwellings. The committee did not make a specific acreage recommendation for clustered units.

The adopted recommendations also include proposals to recycle wastewater and removed solids and to require detailed soil and water reports on the dangers posed by seepage pits for septic sewage disposal in hillside areas.

The pits are cut deep into the soil, rather than running a longer distance at a shallower depth, because the soil cannot absorb the septic liquid as well.

The committee report notes that "the destination of effluent from seepage pits in the Valley is largely unknown and the quality of this effluent when it presumably reaches the groundwater is unknown."

SEVERAL COMMITTEE members expressed concerns that the effluent could be flowing into the groundwater virtually untreated. When it reaches the water table of the Carmel River aquifer, it could affect not only Valley water supplies, but supplies for the entire Monterey Peninsula since the Peninsula depends upon California-American Water Co. wells in Carmel Valley.

The issue of low-cost housing was discussed for the second week in a row, and presentations from county and regional authorities on the matter only reinforced the generally gloomy outlook for such units in the Valley.

Bruce Moore of the Monterey County Housing Authority said the county could only subsidize home construction for units costing no more than $40,000 for a three-bedroom, two-bath house.

The rent subsidy levels the county can afford range from a studio apartment at $199, one bedroom for $223, two bedroom for $271 and three bedrooms or more for $376.

Committee member Don Middleton, Valley realty agent, pointed out that this is well below the prevailing rents charged in Carmel Valley.

Moore said the housing authority is looking into the purchase of Rippling River, a federal housing project for the handicapped east of Carmel Valley Village on Carmel Valley Road.

It could become subsidized housing for the elderly, he said.

Warren Freeman of AMBAG said the Valley's "fair share" of the estimated 2,400 subsidized units needed annually would be about 17 units per year. There are now four subsidized units in all of the Valley.

FRACTURED FAIRY TALE

"CLOSE ENCOUNTERS OF A FOURTH KIND"

As you recall, the last time our "outer space friends" visited Earth, they were interested in learning about people. On this Fourth Encounter, they were interested in houses. Why houses?? Well, there is a tremendous shortage of fine homes on their planet and over one million new homes must be built this year. Thus, their mission was to find the "ideal house" on Earth and obtain the building plans. Fortunately, our friends had a fast space ship and were able to look at every house on our planet in just a few weeks. Now, would you believe the "ideal house" they selected for their planet is a three-bedroom, two-and-one-half-bath, tri-level home right here in Pebble Beach, California?

They were really excited about the arrangement of rooms on various levels, the ultra-modern Kitchen, the beautiful Family Room, the two Fireplaces, the Sun Deck, the extensive use of Glass, and the Open Beamed Ceilings. And, when I asked what they liked most about the home, their Leader said, "Tra, La, De, Dum...," which means ... "The Golf Course View." In fact, they were so impressed with this view that they decided to introduce the game of golf on their planet just so each new home will overlook a golf course. Nevertheless, this Fourth Encounter almost produced one problem ... because this Pebble Beach home is so reasonably priced, one of our visitors wanted to take it with him aboard the space ship. However, the Leader felt that since we gave them the building plans, it would only be fair to leave "the ideal home" here for someone on Earth to enjoy.

ARCHITECT-DESIGNED PEBBLE BEACH HOME NEW, 4 BDRMS., 4½ BATHS, SPANISH STYLE

The architect of this remarkable, almost 4,000 sq. ft. home has captured the charm and feeling of some of those huge homes that were built in Pebble Beach in the 1920's. The big difference here is that you don't have plumbing about to wear out, 50 years of other people's dirt, and a kitchen designed for indentured servants. The house has 3 fireplaces, 2 Jenn-Aire units, dining room, family room, den, triple garage with three Genie openers and much, much more. The price is $750,000, and the location is terrific.

4 BDRMS., 2 BATHS NEAR CARMEL MISSION

This large, fairly new family home lies between Carmel city greenbelt and the Carmel Mission. It is in a very interesting setting. It has a dining room AND a family room. Best of all, it has a very low price of only $129,500.

OUTSTANDING 2-BR. & DEN, NEAR TOWN & BEACH

This is a really beautiful, older home that has been remodeled and decorated under the supervision of Beth Danysh. The house is on 2 lots and the easy-care garden is particularly attractive. The price is $225,000, and we're as enthusiastic about the value offered as we are about the quality and feeling of the home.

LARGE LOT ON SCENIC DRIVE CARMEL POINT, WITH WATER METER

What more can we say other than suggesting you see it. The beach is across the street and the view is of the mountains, the lagoon and river mouth, the Monastery and the waves breaking on the rocks across the bay. A once-in-a-lifetime opportunity. $200,000.

PEBBLE BEACH 2-BR. & DEN, $275,000

And this is the REAL Pebble Beach -- Venadero and Riata, a super location and a beautiful setting. This 15-year-old home has been so extensively remodeled and beautifully decorated that you might think it had just been built for the most fastidious owner. There are 3 baths, a huge kitchen that is almost 2 kitchens, a large dining room, protected patio, 2 fireplaces, BBQ in kitchen, and much, much more. It's an outstanding home for the money.

3 BDRMS., SOUTH OF OCEAN, $120,000

The house is an almost level walk to town. It has 2 baths, in fact one bedroom and bath could make a separate rental. There's an interesting central room with large skylight. It's an unusual Carmel cottage in a fine Carmel neighborhood.

1 BEDROOM NEAR TOWN, $84,500

And it's south of Ocean Ave., too, not far from I. Magnin. It's a fairly typical, early Carmel Cottage, snuggled in the oaks at the rear of a Carmel lot. It can be improved, or it can be used as it is. It's small, but like any antique of value, size isn't everything.

HILLTOP CONTEMPORARY!

Nestled into the hilltop, this impressive four-bedroom, three-and-one-half-bath home in Pebble Beach is tastefully decorated and full of warmth, making it a beautiful family home. The master suite occupies the upper level with a fabulous ocean view. Also enjoy an ocean view from the living room with fireplace, family room, and kitchen/dining area. Kitchen has open beam ceiling and is super efficient. Cozy panelled den; formal dining room; great storage and guest quarters with view over double garage; deck and patio in back. Located on 1.2 acres. $375,000. For appointment to see, contact Toni Glaser at 624-5378.

CHARMING PEBBLE BEACH HOME

Lovely Carmel stone five-bedroom, five-and-one-half-bath home in a beautifully landscaped location with statuesque oak trees surrounding the courtyard. Living room has fireplace, as does the great family room with its towering vaulted ceiling and wet bar with ice machine. Master bedroom with fireplace has just been remodeled with gorgeous armoire and French doors opening to patio. Formal dining room; attractive kitchen with beautiful cabinets and enclosed pantry; separate office or game room with adjoining steam bath. Call Dick Collins at 624-5378.

PEBBLE BEACH MEDITERRANEAN HOME

Located on 2.5 acres near the Lodge at Pebble Beach, this historical Mediterranean is one of the great PB landmarks. Magnificent living room with 18-foot beamed ceiling opens to large brick garden courtyard. Modern kitchen adjoins a large sunny family breakfast room and formal dining room. Library has warmth of cozy fireplace. Master suite with large sitting room has three walk-in closets. Private guest suite; three additional rooms for use as bedrooms, hobby, sewing or whatever; tile and hardwood floors; handsome solid doors; generous storage. These are just a few of the many attractive features of this special home. Offered at $600,000. Call Nancy Loyd Fisher at 624-5378.

MAGNIFICENT TWO ACRE ESTATE

Distinctive English Tudor home situated in an exceptionally choice Pebble Beach area overlooking Pt. Lobos and Carmel Bay. Breathtaking white water views from most of its numerous rooms make this one of the most desirable properties available on the Monterey Peninsula today. REAL ESTATE

FROM CARMEL VALLEY TO CARMEL BAY

The Ideal Country Place

About 2 miles up Corral de Tierra Road there's a sharp left turn, and close beyond it is a small valley with brave little hills rising on each side. In that valley is No. 268, a beautiful 2 bedroom, 2 bath house commanding 1½ acres of flat, fertile land.

It's set about 100 yards from the road behind an acre of orchard with 40 trees: peach, pear, apple, plum, cherry, apricot, fig and walnut. Behind the house a spacious green lawn slopes gently to a creek where cool spring water runs even in drought.

The house itself is white stucco with dark, exposed framing. Thermopane windows all around, and 16 tons of red tile on the roof. A low-walled patio guards the front; a broad deck spans the rear.

The big front door opens to an entry hall crowned by a crystal chandelier. Straight ahead is the 18 x 24 living room, with sliding doors giving on the deck, picture windows looking toward the creek, and a great brick chimney breast covering half the far wall. The ridge beam is 12" x 16", and lesser rafters support the lightly stained redwood ceiling and all that tile above.

At right is the family (or dining) room and kitchen, where expanses of poppy-colored tile counters divide the room and house built-in oven, counter top range, double stainless steel sink, refrigerator and disposal. All go with the house. Dark wood cabinets surround the kitchen and continue into the utility room beyond, where washer and dryer were installed just 3 years ago.

The sleeping area is at the opposite end of the house: master bedroom, 16 x 13, with mirrored wall of closets, windows on 2 sides, and large bath with shower. The second bath, with tub and shower, adjoins it and serves the second bedroom. That has one panelled wall and doors to the rear deck.

Kitchen, utility room, entrance and baths have attractive vinyl floors. Other areas are fully carpeted. There's a small greenhouse at one side, a 2-car garage, and a deep well capable of supplying all needed water. The house is only 3 years old and has been meticulously cared for. If you love the country, you'll love this house. It's $155,000.

COURTYARD ENTRANCE TO A HOME OF QUIET DIGNITY AND CHARM

We have an exciting new listing in Carmel on San Antonio between Seventh and Eighth – West side. The house also fronts on Scenic with a separate entrance leading into three bedrooms and two bathrooms and a family room. This is ideal for children as the path leads down to the gate on Scenic and is a stone's throw from the beach.

The San Antonio level is not visible from the street. It is down a long drive, and the entrance to the side through a gate into a lovely stone courtyard with fountain, curly oak trees, box-lined flower beds and is completely walled. This level has a gorgeous ocean view from Pt. Lobos to Pebble Beach! The living room has French doors from the front garden and patio. It has a cathedral ceiling, is all redwood painted white, with dark white planked floors. On this level is the master bedroom with the most sweeping view of all; its own deck, two dressing rooms with a connecting bath, and draperies matching the wallpaper. There is a second bedroom on this level with its own bathroom and a garden view. It also has matching wallpaper, draperies and bedspreads.

There are just too many extras to relate. It is one of a kind, with an artist's studio with north skylights, sink, mahogany counters and built-in shelves and drawers. There are four large storage units, one for an office, one for bikes, one for garden tools, and so on. The kitchen has all the appliances, plus a large pantry with a washer/dryer and freezer. There is a wine cellar, burglar alarm system to the police station, and much more. You will love the Carmel stone in the garden and all the established planting. It is near the beach and town, but completely secluded and quiet.

We think you will be surprised and pleased, and we're sure you'll agree it is well priced at $425,000.

Villa Favorita
A Monterey Colonial
in Hatton Fields

The classic charm of Monterey Colonial architecture, our heritage from California's romantic Spanish era, is found in Villa Favorita designed by architect Robert Stanton to grace a sunny, half-acre, hillside site, and capture in its windows views of the ocean, Carmel Valley and the Fish Ranch hills.

From the tile-floored foyer, a staircase curves past a stained glass window to the upper story and the gracious living room with handcrafted ceiling beams, manteled fireplace, bookcases and cabinets. Also on this floor are three bedrooms, one with a fireplace, and two attractive bathrooms.

Off the living room is the delightful, skylighted dining/garden room with tile floor and window walls on two sides opening to a spacious brick-paved patio with a barbecue — a pleasant place for outdoor entertaining — and to aid this, there's a door to the patio from the modern kitchen with breakfast alcove.

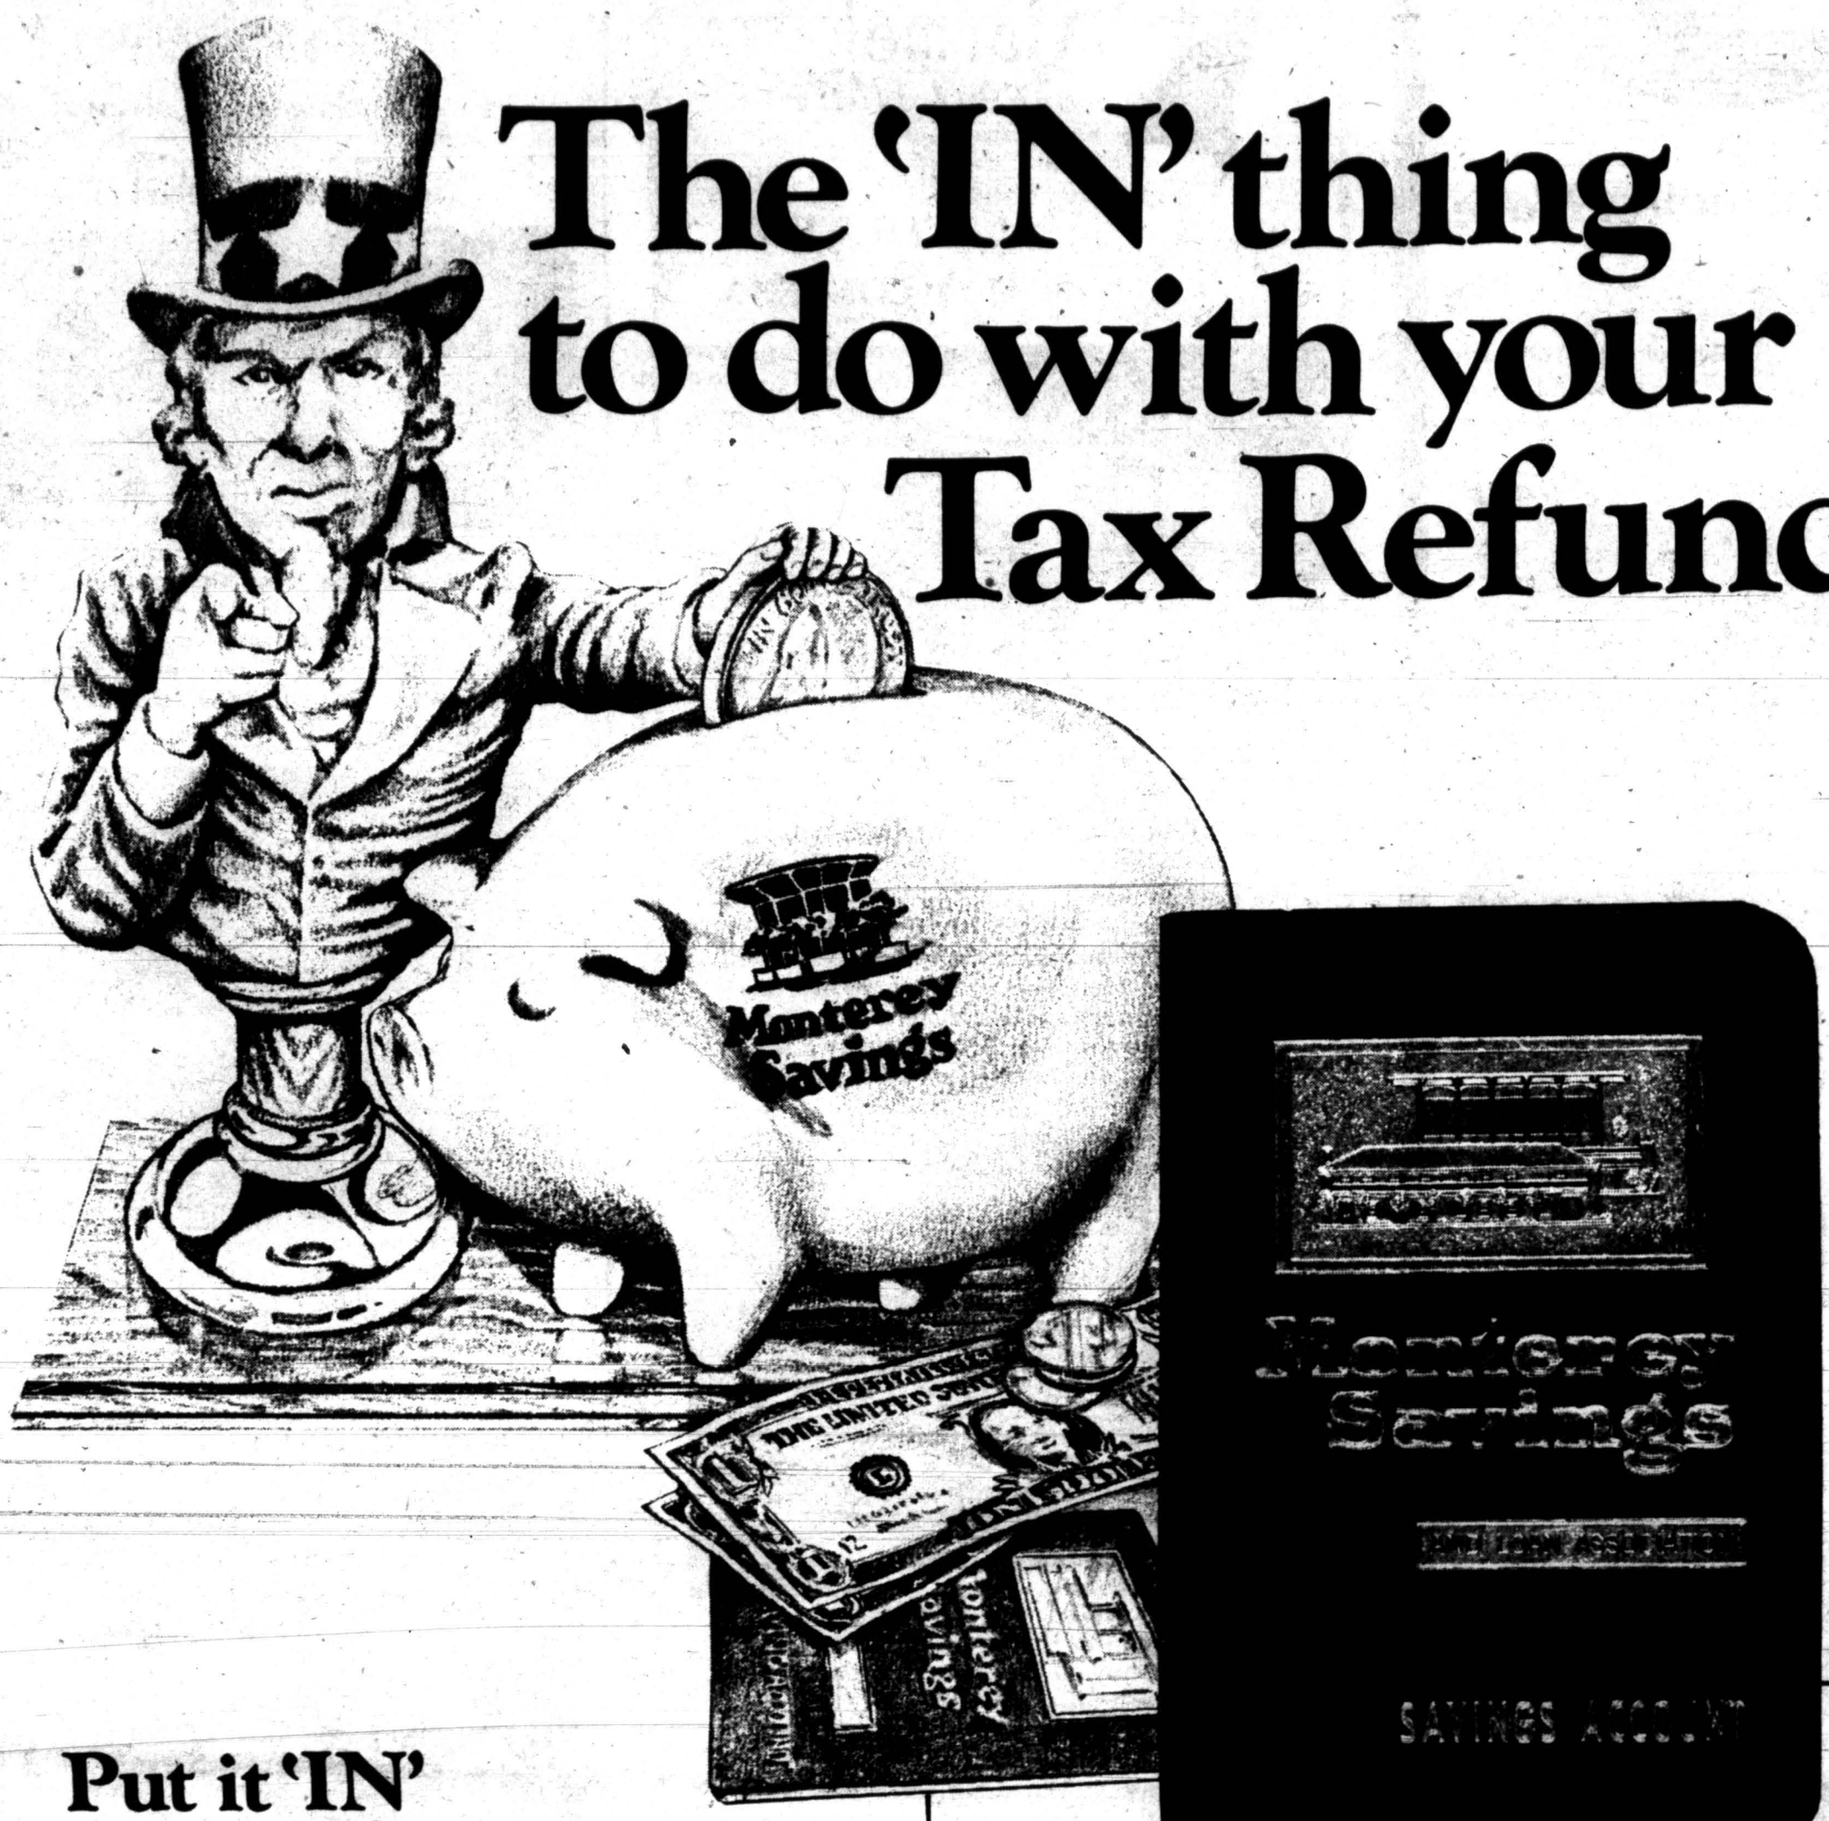

Downstairs is a very large family room (or guest accommodations) with raised hearth fireplace, four built-in bunks, adjacent food preparation center and bathroom. Across the foyer is the double garage with electric door opener. Custom decorated, including rich carpeting, Villa Favorita combines the graciousness of a past era with today's elegance and comfort. Price, $279,500.
